BERRIEN RIGHT FOR INDUSTRY!

Competitive Advantages Abound In County

Berrien county is a good place for location of new industry in 12 specific categories, according to a report prepared by a consulting firm for Twin Cities Area Chamber of Commerce.

The survey by the Fantus Company, of New York and Chicago, says the industries could achieve competitive advantages by locating in Berrien county where there are more pluses than minuses.

The Fantus report is based on a six-month study of existing industry, labor supply, market potential, industrial sites, vocational training, transportation and other factors in attracting new industry.

Called "Job Development Program for Berrien County," the study was financed by a $42,000 study under the federal Comprehensive Employment Training Act because projections indicate that the labor supply is growing faster than the requirements of existing industries, and there will be a surplus of 9,000 in the labor market by 1977.

Berrien's best bets for new industries are in these categories, according to the report:

Marjold business forms, polishes and sanitation goods, miscellaneous concrete products, grey iron foundries, fabricated structural metal products, prepared meats and sausages.

Also, fabricated plate work, miscellaneous metal work, valves and pipe fittings, farm machinery and equipment, engineering and scientific instruments, and contract packaging.

Dennis J. Donovan, director of area development for the Fantus Company, said that under changed economic conditions an additional 17 industries could become viable industrial targets.

The report was presented to the Chamber of Commerce last night at a dinner at Win Schuler's restaurant, Stevensville.

Roger Curry, Chamber executive vice president, said the Fantus plan for job development will be implemented as part of the Chamber's economic development program.

John Banyon, Chamber president, said: "When this Fantus plan is underway, the Chamber will be in the process of implementing the most comprehensive economic job development program that Berrien county has ever experienced."

Berrien's strong points for luring new industries include ample supply of labor, competitive wage levels, strategic access to large industrial and consumer markets, an abundant supply of electrical energy, and superior industrial sites.

The report states the Pipestone Industrial District is a "showcase" as a selling point for new industry, and the $8,000 an acre asking price is "highly competitive." Also with potential is an industrial park under

Officials Say Apollo Hitch Minor

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP)—America's Apollo, on its last proud mission of history and diplomacy, ran into an irritating mechanical problem today in its race through space to hook up for a cosmic visit with the Soviet spaceship Soyuz.

If not solved, the problem—a jammed probe—could block the American and Soviet astronauts from crawling from ship to ship. But ground controllers said it should be easy to overcome.

They said the problem endangered neither the American astronauts nor the basic purpose of the joint flight—docking and visiting in space.

A Russian official said he could not believe the problem would not be solved.

Both craft sped from earth Tuesday in launches of the two spacefaring nations that had been independent competitors until this mission and are now ready for the first time to join ships and hands in space.

U.S. astronauts Thomas P. Stafford, Vance D. Brand and Donald K. Slayton rode the Apollo in orbital pursuit of the Soviet ship manned by cosmonauts Alexei Leonov and Valeri Kubasov.

It was the last voyage of an Apollo spacecraft. America's next manned space venture will be a shuttle flight to be launched four years from now.

If the probe problem is licked and all else—including the merging of orbits—goes as planned, Apollo will overtake Soyuz at midday Thursday and the astronauts and cosmonauts will execute a tricky linkup rich in drama and symbolism.

The problem boils down to this:

The Apollo carries with it a tubular module which is to join with the Soyuz. This module is to form an air-sealed passage between the two craft.

Jutting from the nose of the Apollo is a probe which links the command vehicle to the docking module. But the probe jammed when the astronauts tried to remove it to clear the tunnel.

Mission control officials in Houston said the probe could easily be cleared, using simple hand tools.

"I think they will probably get it out pretty quickly," flight controller Neil Hutchinson said. He explained that the astronauts could get at it by removing a single screw.

Meanwhile, the astronauts were told to sleep and rest up for today's unscheduled work.

In Moscow, one of the flight directors for the Soviet control center, Viktor Blagov, told a news conference: "I believe this problem will be solved. I can't believe we won't solve it."

Before discovering the stuck probe, the astronauts had fixed a minor problem involving a clogged urine disposal system.

The astronauts fired the powerful service propulsion engine on the Apollo craft twice Tuesday night. In the first of a series of maneuvers to adjust their orbit for the rendezvous.

"Sort of like being bumped by a truck," said Brand of the initial burn of less than a second.

After docking, the spacemen will open both ends of the airlock tunnel connecting the

Dr. Robert Locey, Berrien Health Chief, Resigns

Dr. Robert P. Locey, head of the Berrien County Health department since its formation some 10 years ago, has submitted his resignation to take a similar post in Oakland county.

His letter of resignation is to be presented to the Berrien board of commissioners at its July meeting tomorrow, according to Leslie H. Fischer, board chairman.

The letter indicates the resignation is to be effective Aug. 11. "He brought our health department from nothing to one of the top-rated health departments in the state," said Fischer in revealing Locey's decision to leave Berrien.

Dr. Locey could not be reached this morning for comment. Fischer, however, said Dr. Locey "essentially has completed his mission here, and is going on to a bigger job."

Oakland county has a population of approximately 1,000,000, and the health department there has a fulltime staff of some 300 persons. The Berrien health department has about 85 fulltime workers and another 20-30 part-time employees.

Dr. Locey was hired by the county in 1965 for the purpose of establishing a state-recognized county health department. Previously, the county had provided some health services under an informal program that did not have the formal recognition of the Michigan Health department.

At a banquet in March honoring Dr. Locey, Frank Poorman, chairman of the county health board, reported that the county's spending for health programs now is around $1.5 million a year—largely in federal and state funds—compared to about $100,000 a decade ago.

In addition to directing the health department, Dr. Locey was the first project director for the Southwestern Michigan Comprehensive Health Planning association. He also was the chief founder of BCV Health Services, Inc., which today operates several group health service clinics in southwestern Michigan.

Teacher Strike Bill Faces More Delays

By MALCOLM JOHNSON

Associated Press Writer

LANSING, Mich. (AP)—A showdown vote on a bill to legalize teacher strikes was delayed again Tuesday when majority Democrats could not gather enough votes to alter the bill.

The Democratic attempt to amend the bill was tentatively rescheduled for today. But Senate Majority Leader William Fitzgerald said further delay was possible if he couldn't round up 20 votes.

Fitzgerald is leading an attempt to change the bill back to the form in which it left the House. That version would allow strikes of up to five weeks. Teachers could make up as many as three weeks at the end of the school year.

Gov. William Milliken, saying the House bill discourages early settlements and encourages prolonged strikes, has promised to veto that version. He wants economic penalties for both teachers and schools to begin as early as possible.

Senate Republicans, aided by a handful of Democrats, last week amended the bill to restrict strikes to three weeks.

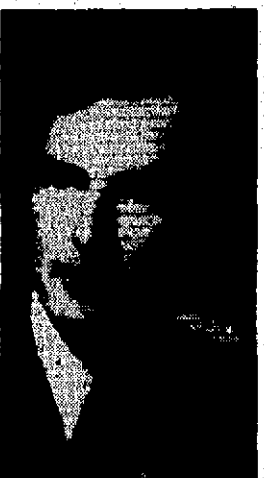

Only one week could be made up with pay.

Democrats oppose the shorter strike period but say they will not fight amendments which would seek court injunctions to force teachers back to work after two weeks of economic penalties.

The battle can be seen at a

Monopolies Shouldn't Have Right To Strike

As this is being written (Tuesday afternoon), Democrats in the Michigan Senate are rushing to garner votes for their version of a bill giving public school teachers the right to strike.

Essentially, Democrats in the Legislature want to give teachers at least five weeks strike time and relatively light financial penalties for exceeding limits of the law. For their part, Republican legislators seem to differ only in degree. GOP lawmakers would give teachers less time to strike and apply tougher economic sanctions for violations.

The question is why public school teachers, or policemen, or firemen, or city public works employees, or postmen, or any other monopolistic group of public service workers should have any right to strike at all?

Private enterprise is an entirely different ball game. If Ford employees strike, the public can buy Chrysler, GM, AMC or foreign cars. If Chicago Tribune employees strike, readers of the Windy City can buy the Sun-Times or Daily News. Or listen to radio. Or watch TV for their news.

But when policemen and firemen, or garbage men, strike, the public is completely without protection, or service. That's because the law gives these public employees a monopoly. There's no competing service.

Public school teaching is not quite the same but very nearly. Constitutional and statutory provisions for tax revenue to support the public schools make parochial and private schools, realistically speaking, a very minor competitive factor.

If the citizens of Michigan think giving more power to already power-drunk unions is going to make life in this state better, they're nuts! Take just two warnings from the past few days: one admittedly predictable, but the other almost shocking.

Predictably, the president of the Michigan Manufacturers' association, George Van Pusem, speaking here Monday, said that this year's labor-dominated legislature will add about a billion dollars to the cost of doing business in Michigan. Shockingly, the New York Times—the venerable patron saint of all unions since man's memory to the contrary runneth not—has suddenly decided that public employees' unions stink. At least in New York City.

In an editorial of July 8 entitled "Union Ruled City," the Times charges that "New York is working for its unionized civil service workers, not vice versa. The real power in the city is held by the municipal unions. Last week's illegal sanitation strike, a wretched charade in which every step was apparently orchestrated by the union leadership... was the end-product of three decades in which one New York mayor after another systematically fostered the growth of centralized union power. The rationale always was that strong, secure unions would bring cooperation for more efficient civil service. Instead, it delivered into union hands ironclad control over every essential civic department, with a precipitous increase in personnel and payroll and a steady shrinkage in standards of performance."

That's exactly the direction in which Michigan is heading, particularly with regard to the biggest union of all—the teachers' union.

Public school teachers should not have the right to strike. They should negotiate for their pay with the elected representatives of the public, the local school boards.

And if the teachers don't like the result, they should not have the right to go to some professional arbitrator who makes a living by giving half to this side and half to that, in the process inevitably raising the cost of whatever product is involved.

If public school teachers want arbitration, let them submit their negotiated settlements for approval or disapproval to the constituents of their respective school districts. What better expression of grass roots democracy could be found?

Conversion Of Coal Deserves Full Support

Converting coal to liquid or gaseous form has at least two major advantages: Coal, with its abundant reserves, could be used for energy sources now limited to petroleum and natural gas; and at least some of coal's air pollutants could be removed in the process.

Coal conversion is not yet an economical process, but it is drawing greater attention. Researchers at Penn State University are expanding their inventory of coal types to include as many as 1,300 samples from all parts of the nation.

Properties of coal differ by location. Knowing more about their similarities and differences will enable workers on the conversion process to develop extraction techniques. It might be possible to develop coal derivatives with unique characteristics for specific applications.

As with other types of energy research, the fruits of coal conversion lie somewhere in the future. Unlike the situations in some other research projects on energy, however, the basic ingredient is in abundant supply.

'Making Tracks' Just Might Be A Wise Move

A gigantic WPA-type project to put unemployed Americans to work rebuilding the nation's rail system at first glance seem worth the billions of dollars it would cost. Rail tracks across the nation, but especially those belonging to the bankrupt eastern and midwestern lines, are in disrepair.

But the question which needs to be answered is, if the tracks were put back into first-class condition would that in itself stop the decline of major rail systems? In short, would such a major project make a positive and lasting economic contribution or would it simply be a make-work project?

Track maintenance costs are a factor in the financial plight of the railroads, but only one of several.

Nevertheless, if unemployment continues high, The Big Track Task is well worth considering.

DISLIKES ANY GRAIN DEAL

So the Soviet Union is in the market of purchasing large quantities of grain from the United States. Let's hope our agriculture officials won't let this deal be a repeat of 1972, when Richard Nixon, as President, announced a $750 million credit arrangement to enable the Soviets to buy United States wheat, grain and feed. Although the loans financed through the agriculture department was thought then to meet Russia's needs, it turned out to be only the tip of an export iceberg. Within a month it was disclosed, the Soviet's secretly negotiated large cash purchases of United States grain, mainly wheat, amounting to more than one billion. This time the Russians are trying to keep the purchases secret, negotiating through third parties for ships to carry the grain to Soviet's ports.

One of the third parties discussing ship charters with the Russians was Glen R. Bell, a deputy assistant Secretary of Agriculture, said the United States government officials were aware of the reports, but were trying to confirm them; he said we were aware that the Soviets were chartering vessels for shipment of grain from North America to the Baltic and Black Seas.

Well Mr. Batz, you certainly have a ridiculous senseless humor, by saying even if the shortage may have raised prices, but nobody went without bread. Oh! the public is positive you and yours didn't have to do without. But how much do you know about other families?

I'm sure the public doesn't mind helping the very needy, but we are against our grain being sold to large foreign countries on credit and for very low interest if any, and probably sharing our grain with a country that refuses to share their product with us.

READER DISLIKES ROAD INTO PARK

I have been dismayed by the diversion of some of our wild State Park areas to more intensive recreational use. I would like to know what inspired the short-sighted plan to build a two lane road into a 312 acre tract of land which contains the only extensive stand of virgin forest in this part of the state. I am talking about the road which has been built into Warren Woods State Park, which until now was a wilderness preserve left entirely in its natural state (as was intended by E. K. Warren). Nothing was intended to be disturbed in the forest to insure that the natural balance remained intact. With the limited access from Warren Woods road by foot trails the park remained relatively untouched and undisturbed by excessive visitation.

An example of what increased numbers of people can do, can be plainly seen in Warren Dunes State Park where dunes near the parking area are rapidly being reduced to piles of mobile sand. In such a climax plant ecosystem even a slight disruption of the materials on the forest floor will destroy vegetation, promote erosion and alter the natural character of the forest. The trees near the trails of Warren Woods have already been unavoidably scarred over the years by a relatively few mindless individuals desiring immortality by carving their initials.

Our National Park System has in recent years taken great pains to limit or eliminate vehicle traffic in the design of new parks. The roads and the vehicles are marring many of

Prophet, Loss: Capital Ledger

WASHINGTON — In their ongoing research into ways to destroy one another, military scientists of several nations are working on the use of magnified light and sound as war weapons. High frequency "infra sound" theoretically would work on soldiers in the same way some gasses do, and brilliant light could blind the opposition or induce epileptic fits in its ranks. Sen. Robert Packwood, (R-Ore.) estimates the bureaucracy necessary to administer the registering of American handguns would cost $4 billion, or about $100 per pistol. Restive Vietnamese refugees say they are eagerly awaiting the fate of the 200 who are officially trying to go back to Southeast Asia. If that group gets back and if it is handled fairly by the new Communist regime, the word is "many thousands" of other refugees will also opt to return. While the nation awaits positive action from Congress on a variety of critical matters, including energy, unemployment and housing, the news from the House Small Business Subcommittee on Commodities and Services is that it is thinking of enacting laws to aid people who are complaining about, sigh, a shortage of home-canning lids.

If ailing Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas retires soon, as some predict, women pushing for a female replacement, hope, president Ford does not follow the strategy of his predecessor. On announcing potential court nominees, Richard Nixon always included the names of women with limited appeal, thus fearing too great objection when he chose the men. The Union Bank of Switzerland has recently determined that Kuwait, with $11,000 worth of goods and services for each member of its population is the wealthiest per capita nation in the world; the U.S., with $8,585 worth of things per person, ranks No. 3. John Connally has told friends he is "probably" going to run for the Senate from Texas. Congress passes about 600 laws annually, but non-elected bureaucrats in government agencies write 6000 laws a year of their own. Bela Abzug, the human public address system from New York City, is hands down the most thoroughly resented member of Congress. "Even her staff hates her," says a former Abzug assistant, "she is selfish, brutish, tyrannical and uncool — women's liberation can have the old crew."

Who's in control of your town? Statistics indicate that between 1951 and 1972 the number of state, county and municipal workers increased by 151 per cent, their payroll increased by almost 600 per cent, their union membership grew by 130 per cent, and the number of their strikes multiplied by a factor of 1,000. Title 10, Section 889 of the U.S. Code threatens court martial or worse for any retired general who is convicted of using "contemptuous words" in speech or print against the president, the vice president, Congress, the secretary of defense or governors of any state; presumably, though, they may rap other generals. The Republican National Committee spent $125,000 on the first of three TV specials designed to enlist new support; viewers have thus far sent in contributions of less than $6000. Sen. Harry Byrd of Virginia says the cost of running Congress has doubled in five years and tripled in 10; more than 17,000 people now work for the 535-member body.

Carter Counting On Fast Start

WASHINGTON — As he campaigns across the country, Democratic Presidential candidate Jimmy Carter is frequently asked whether he feels his Southern background might handicap his prospects in other regions.

So it was natural for the former Georgia governor to include an unusual question in a private national poll taken for him by Pat Cadell two months ago: Would you prefer a Southerner as President?

Surprisingly, a slim majority said, they would prefer a Southerner in every section of the country but California and New England.

It is not clear what political significance, if any, can be found in this apparent widespread affection for Southerners. But at a minimum it seems to indicate that the traditional resistance, to Southern leadership at the national level, which has plagued that region's politicians for a century, may be crumbling.

No Southern-based politician has been elected to the Presidency since the Civil War without first having succeeded to that office from the Vice Presidency. Lyndon Johnson, the first Southerner to sit in the White House in 1969, often grumbled that he felt most of the nation resented his origins.

The major problem which isolated the South from the rest of the nation was racial segregation, but Carter believes that in the past decade sufficient progress has been made to allow a Southerner to seek national office now without the stigma of racism. His theory is going to be tested on a grand scale next year, for all but one of the current Democratic Presidential candidates is from the South or Southwest.

Carter points out that Southern influence on national politics has been growing steadily in recent years. Seventeen of the 19 major committee and commission posts within both parties are held by Southerners.

Carter, 38, is a relatively unknown candidate who does not even have a headquarters in this city yet, and so far his campaign organization is mostly his family. But he has met the minimum to qualify for matching funds under the new campaign finance law in 10 states and expects to do so in the required additional 10 by fall. (Three other candidates have already fully qualified.)

He intends to run an ambitious campaign, entering all 30 primaries. His goal, like that of the other dark horse candidates, is to do well enough in the early primaries to gain momentum for the others. Currently he is concentrating upon building an organization in New Hampshire, Florida and Iowa, which hold the first Presidential caucuses.

Carter says, "There's not the slightest chance in the world Wallace will be on the ticket," and hopes to be the one to bring him down by beating him in Florida, a traditionally pro-Wallace state which most of the other candidates plan to avoid.

As governor, Carter won a reputation as a budget-cutter and a reformer concerned about improving life for blacks and the poor of any color. He looks faintly like John F. Kennedy. That's about all most people know about him so far, and that the fact he hails from the South. But he is fully committed to the campaign, and until the primaries begin that will suffice.

Benton Home Rehabilitation Was Shoddy, Couple Claims

By RALPH LUTZ

Staff Writer

Mr. and Mrs. Ealvin Anderson about two years ago qualified for a $3,500 federal grant to rehabilitate their home at 903 Waukonda avenue, Benton township.

The Andersons charged before the township board of trustees last night that the work was shoddy, and their home is in "worse shape than before." They said the roof leaks and water is ruining the structure, the front door doesn't fit, and new wiring most needed, was never installed.

The family wants the Housing and Urban Development agency (HUD) to get the work done properly.

The grant was under the neighborhood development program, aimed at rejuvenating homes and neighborhoods of low-income families. The money came from HUD through Model Cities. Both neighborhood development and Model Cities programs ended last month. A new umbrella-type agency, Community Development, was started this month.

Judd Spray, director of Community Development for the township, filled in details on the Anderson's problem for the board, which followed with three separate resolutions:

—Ask HUD to respond within 10 days on what can be done for the Anderson's home.

—Study possible legal action against the man who did the contracting job, if HUD doesn't reply.

—Instructed the supervisor to appoint a committee, including a licensed contractor, to write a manual of standards for future rehabilitation work, under Community Development.

Spray told the board that Maurice Bishop was the contractor for renovation of the Anderson residence.

Spray also told the board during the public meeting that the Anderson's complaint has been investigated by the Berrien Consumer Protection Unit (CPU) and the FBI. The FBI became involved because the grant was federal money, under a federal program.

Bishop, contacted by this newspaper today, said he did everything he could to satisfy Anderson. "I went out of my way to satisfy him," Bishop said. Bishop added that he did the renovation work at the Anderson home, one of 15 projects he did in the area, and that Anderson was the only one to complain.

As to roofing problems, Bishop said he went back and corrected a problem of leaks. As to a front door that reportedly doesn't fit, Bishop said Anderson picked out the most expensive door he could find and then refused to have it installed later, and another door was substituted.

"All involved, including HUD, agree that the Anderson's problem is real," Spray told the board. "HUD just hasn't responded," Spray added.

"I'm afraid a great credibility gap has been created for HUD, and even me, as far as the Andersons are concerned," Spray exclaimed.

Work at the Anderson home was among 26 rehabilitation projects during the first year of neighborhood development. Spray told the board. Spray said Bishop was one of the contractors and was the one who worked on the Anderson home.

Bishop last March was arrested by the Berrien CPU for allegedly failing to have a state contractor's license, while doing over $50,000 worth of work under neighborhood redevelopment.

Bishop pleaded innocent in March when arraigned before Fifth District Judge Ronald J.

Pete Mitchell Defends Record As BH Official

Benton Harbor Public Services Director Dwight (Pete) Mitchell today released a response to charges made by the "Clean Slate" group of candidates that he and other city employees received a "silent rollback" in property taxes.

Mitchell is one of five present or former city employees charged by the Clean Slate group of candidates with receiving a reduction in property taxes.

The Clean Slate group of Benton Harbor candidates includes Mayor Charles Joseph, Commissioner Alfred Williams, Helen Ford, Charles Shepherd, Barbara Huckaby, Elias McGrew and Willie T. Burton. Following is the complete text of Mitchell's response to the charges:

"In response to the charges made by the 'Clean Slate Committee' that mentioned my name as a public official enjoying a silent rollback on my property taxes:

My first response was to have no response because the charges were so nebulous and unfounded that I didn't want to give anyone the benefit of having me participate in a political found-rob-in of accusation and denial.

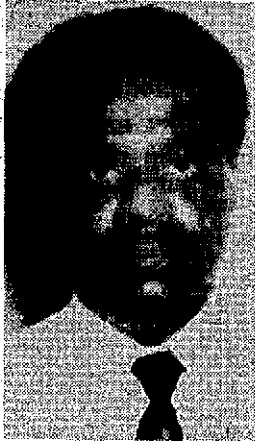

But in fairness to my parents who worked very hard to raise eight children to be law-abiding citizens I feel I should respond.

First of all, I think it has been established in recent articles that any reduction in the property taxes on my home came about prior to my purchasing it. I do now and have always paid the taxes stipulated in my contract dated Dec. 18, 1973, the day of my purchase.

The important thing is that it takes a lifetime to establish a good reputation but only a short time to have it destroyed. I do not intend for this to happen to my family name simply because of some individuals' political aspirations.

I am the Public Works Director for the City of Benton Harbor, and a damn good one not only in my opinion but in the opinion of many—many residents and business people alike.

In the past two years this Department has grown to be one of the finest in Southwestern Michigan. Gaining recognition by the American Public Works Association. The gains of this department didn't come easy but through the efforts of the men and women employed there.

The motivation behind the charges of the Clean Slate Committee is still somewhat a mystery to me. But I refuse to be alienated or distracted from my duties and responsibilities to the Citizens of Benton Harbor, and continue to pledge myself and the members of my staff to continue to provide the best services within our power for all the people concerned.

Famed School Chum Says 'Thanks'

Mr. and Mrs. L. Montgomery Shepard have received a personal note of thanks from President Gerald Ford for being among 400 contributors to the new swimming pool at the White House. Shepard, president of Berrien County Abstract & Title Co., is a leading Republican fund-raiser with a long association with Ford, starting when Shepard was an undergraduate at Yale and Ford was his junior varsity football coach.

The note of thanks contained a personal P.S. from Ford: "The Ellis must stick together."

The note said the President and Mrs. Ford thank the contributors for making the pool possible. The pool is complete and its dressing room is expected to be finished in a few weeks. The President also extolled swimming as "a superior exercise for good health."

SJ Conspiracy Hearing To Resume In 2 Weeks

By NICK SMITH
Staff Writer

Shortly after receiving payments from a St. Joseph contracting firm, one defendant in a fraud case allegedly sent large amounts of money to a second defendant and to the teenage son of a third defendant.

Little else was learned yesterday in Berrien Fifth District court during the recess-hidden second day of preliminary hearings for the three men. After yesterday's session was adjourned at noon it was learned that the hearing involving a lawyer, a former businessman and a former state policeman would not resume for about two weeks.

Charged with three counts of conspiracy to obtain $24,372 illegally from Beaudoin-Stueland Electric Co. of St. Joseph are William H. Lanphear, 51 St. Joseph Alley, Thomas McCoy, 47, and James A. Boreham, 36. Lanphear, of Sault Ste. Marie, is a retired state police lieutenant; McCoy a former Berrien county assistant prosecutor, and Boreham is a former president of Beaudoin-Stueland.

All but five minutes of the second day of the examination yesterday were spent in chambers with visiting Van Buren District Judge Donald Goodwillie.

Special Prosecutor Donald A. Johnston III, of Kent county, said that he and the three defense attorneys spent two lengthy recesses in debate over which exhibits could be introduced as evidence. He added that this procedure in the judge's chambers speeds up the introduction of exhibits.

Only one witness, of a possible 13 who may be called, testified yesterday before adjournment. Because of scheduling problems the hearing will resume in, "I'm guessing two weeks," said Johnston.

The chief assistant prosecutor for Kent county and a Van Buren judge were brought into the case because Berrien authorities, many of whom have worked with Atty. McCoy disqualified themselves from the case.

Albert J. Maki, cashier at the Central Savings bank, Sault Ste. Marie, testified yesterday and introduced bank records under subpoena. Lanphear, retired commander of the Sault Ste. Marie state police post, had both a savings and a personal checking account with the bank from June of 1974 until February of 1975, Maki stated.

On June 27, 1974, Lanphear reportedly filed a statement with the Chippewa county clerk stating that he was doing business as Soo Surplus.

Maki testified that Mr. and Mrs. Lanphear shared the checking account. And he brought along 22 pieces of evidence which were admitted.

Asst. Prosecutor Patrick Ford, also of the Kent county prosecutor's staff, explained outside of court that the evidence was divided into three categories, to correspond with the three counts of fraudulent actions which are alleged.

One group of records contained:

A check written by Beaudoin-Stueland to Soo Surplus on Jan. 10, 1975, for $6,400. A record of this check was introduced into

BH Planners Ask Review Of Riverfront Cafe Plans

The Benton Harbor planning commission last night recommended a review of a request to build a restaurant along the St. Joseph river front on Riverview drive.

The review, to be conducted by the planning commission and the city commission, would determine how plans for the restaurant would fit into overall plans for a proposed municipal marina in the area.

The commission recommended that the review of both the proposed marina and a request by Tony Mammolina to build a restaurant along the river front be completed within 90 days.

The planning commission is an advisory body that makes recommendations to the city commission.

The proposed municipal marina would be built along Riverview between Main street and the city boat ramp.

Mammolina, owner of Mammolina's bar, 300 Territorial, Benton Harbor, made the request to purchase land from the city just north of where the Penn Central railroad tracks were removed. Mammolina said the restaurant would be accessible to both boats and cars.

The commission also directed Mammolina to draw up a rough sketch of his plans to build the restaurant on 150 feet of waterfront on the site.

Benton Harbor city officials are currently considering the construction of a 300-slot municipal marina along the St. Joseph river. Funds for the project are being sought from federal and state agencies. Approval would be required from the Michigan State Waterways Commission and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Charles Eckenstahler, Berrien county planning director, also addressed the commission on the progress of a transportation study on the I-94 penetrator and the overall concept of the I-94 crosstown.

BH Desegregation Trial Now May Be In August

The start of a new trial in the Benton Harbor school desegregation district suit has been delayed from July 21 to a tentative early August time.

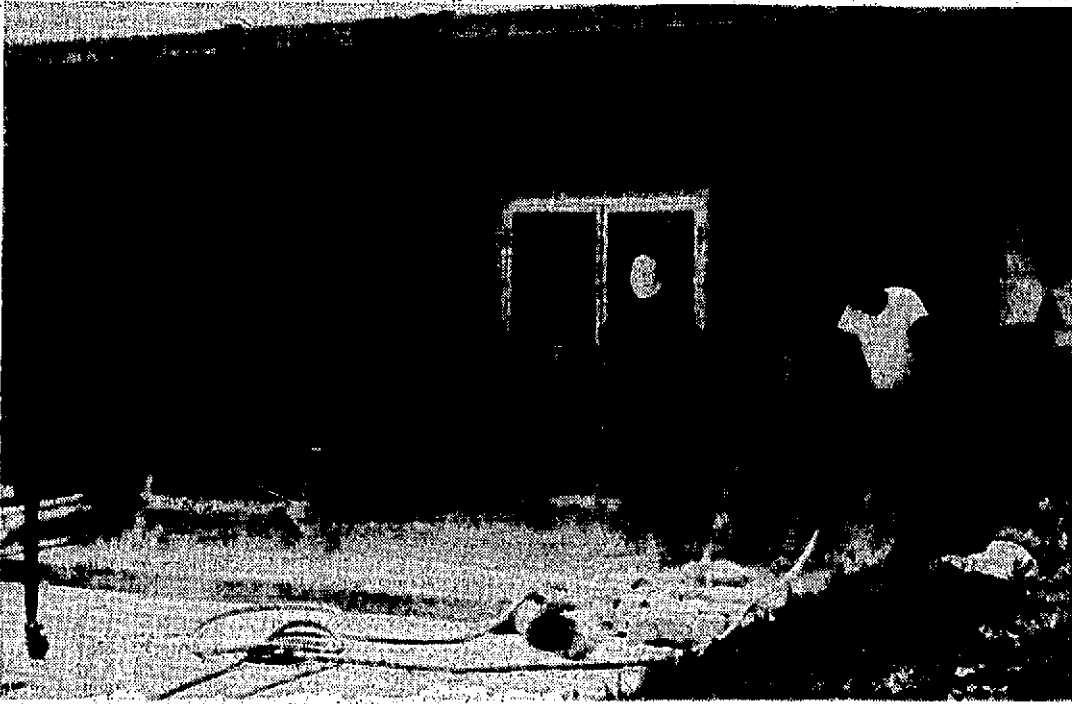

The office of Atty. Percy DeFrancesco, counsel for the Benton Harbor district, said today DeFrancesco notified yesterday of the delay. It was indicated the trial now may begin in the week of Aug. 4-8, but there was no firm date. The place and time of trial has not been decided either, his office said.

Judge Noel Fox of the federal district court at Grand Rapids is under instruction from the U.S. Appeals Court in Cincinnati to hear the case before the start of the next school year in September. Defendants in addition to the Benton Harbor school district are the Eau Claire and Coloma school districts, the Concerned Parents and Taxpayers of Sodus, the Concerned Parents for Hagar Township School District No. 4 (Eau Claire), and the State Board of Education.

Plaintiffs in the 1970 case are Mrs. Ruth Berry and her six children and other parents and students in the Benton Harbor district. The NAACP is pressing the suit on behalf of the plaintiffs.

ATTENTION! Future Brides

Brides-to-be planning engagement announcements and wedding stories in this newspaper are asked to observe the following rules:

Engagement and wedding forms are available in the women's department at The Herald-Palladium offices in Benton Harbor or St. Joseph.

The pertinent information should be typed or plainly printed in filling out these forms to prevent errors.

Wedding forms should be picked up at least two weeks and turned in one week before the wedding is to take place.

When wedding information is sent within two months of the engagement announcement date, only ONE picture will be run. The bride-to-be may have her choice.

Use proper names — not nicknames. In wedding information, use husband's names for married attendants.

Only pictures of the bride in her wedding dress will be used. Formal glossy black and white portraits are preferred.

Engagement and wedding pictures are usually available at this newspaper office after publication for a short time.

Salad Season In Full Swing

Michigan's salad season is in full swing. Crisp, flavorful Michigan lettuce is available in abundance and with locally grown leafy greens on the marketplace, the cost of lettuce is generally cheaper.

Marketing officials of the Michigan Department of Agriculture say growers in the Stockbridge-Munith area in the southeast corner of Ingham county is the largest lettuce producing area in the state. A smaller area is located around Inlay City. In 1974, Michigan produced 28.3 million pounds of field lettuce on 1,300 acres to take ninth place among the states.

Michigan lettuce growers are using the latest innovation in the industry, precision seeding. This procedure involves pelletized seed used with a special seeder. When coated with clay or vermiculite, seeds become round, uniformly-sized pellets.

They are planted in rows at precise intervals in highly organic, muck soil. Planting schedule varies depending on daily temperatures, which are predetermined by computer. Planting is done on cool days.

For best results, handle fresh Michigan lettuce with care. If it is to be stored for use over a few days, rinse it under the faucet in tepid water; holding the stem end up to avoid letting the water soak into the inner leaves.

Shake lettuce dry and store in the vegetable crisper of your refrigerator, or wrap in a kitchen towel or plastic bag and place on a low refrigerator shelf.

Before using, wash lettuce again. Separate by cutting out the core, then fill head with water by holding under the faucet. The force of the water will separate and wash the leaves.

Provides Interlochen Flowers

INTERLOCHEN — Small pots of wildflowers, ferns, mosses and other woodland things grace the tables in the main cafeteria at the National Music Camp.

An arrangement of dried flowers with tree fungus for a base sits in the sunshine on a windowsill of the Maddy building.

Queen Anne's lace, yellow and white daisies and other wildflowers and greenery form a huge centerpiece for the punch table of a faculty-staff reception.

Fifty to 60 new arrangements are made up every day.

They are the work of Alma Murphree and her four co-workers in the flower shop at Interlochen.

Interlochen's founder, Dr. Joseph Maddy, had in mind not only a summer of enrichment artistically for the young people who come, but also an opportunity to learn more about nature. The buildings are of stone and wood, tucked among the trees on the campus spread out between the shores of two lakes.

Swimming and one other outdoor sport are required parts of the curriculum and there is a nature museum at one end of the camp.

So when Alma Murphree was put in charge of providing flowers for the tables, and told she could buy them, she was understandably appalled.

"I couldn't see cultivated flowers in this rustic setting," she says in her soft southern voice. "Michigan is a field of beauty. I've never seen a state with such resources."

And she set about to blend the beauty of nature with the beauty of music.

Alma and Malton Murphree are from Birmingham, Ala. This is their 29th summer at Interlochen. Malton is now master piano technician.

There was no flower shop when Mrs. Murphree first came. She made up the bouquets in her room. Later she arranged them in the dining room but had to work between serving hours so she moved to a small room in the basement. Now she has a convenient room in the basement of the modern stone student center with a refrigerator for fresh flowers.

That first year of the flower department, 1948, she asked to spend the flower money instead for a university student assistant. They went into the woods each morning to gather what they could carry back. Sometimes the high school boys helped.

Today, Mrs. Murphree still goes out into the woods herself to gather flowers but she has lots of them brought in to her, too, from other campers, friends in the community, even visitors to the area. There are sacks and boxes of beach wood, twigs, moss and fungus, leaves and greenery, and organic potting soil from the woods.

"We gather flowers from the same places year after year because we don't take them all," Mrs. Murphree says. One of the first things she did here was learn from the Department of Natural Resources about the wildflowers and which were protected. She has helped in their preservation, sometimes by transplanting flowers like lady's slippers into the campus flower beds where they can be tended and also seen by many people.

The flower beds at Interlochen are sources of material, too. Members of the Interlochen Women's club help each year in setting out plants (this year there were 34,000 petunias, geraniums and other plants set out.)

"Nothing is wasted. When floral arrangements are dismantled, all those things that can be dried are stripped of their leaves and hung upside down for later use.

There were no flower vases at first, so Mrs. Maddy brought them some things, including bean pots. Mrs. Murphree used the pots as vases and planters of small ferns and other miniature greenery — and greenery arrangements. She uses driftwood (and won a prize in a local flower show with the first driftwood arrangement ever entered there) and anything else she can make suitable. Students in the ceramics department give her small pots and bowls.

By the time the season is well underway, the flower shop crew will have made up a floral centerpiece for each dining room table at Interlochen. Besides making up 30 or 60 of them each day, they must also freshen all the potted plants and fresh flower bouquets located all over the campus.

Mary Alice Wilson, wife of NMC's director, is her assistant and Lee Oikkonen, on the staff 18 years, now works with them, too. There are also two girls, Linda Johnson of Grawn and Pat Lewis, a student from Kalamazoo.

Together they create arrangements from the woods and fields that "spell Interlochen," ranging from large and impressive arrangements to the miniature, delicate and whimsical.

"This is a job with no end," Mrs. Murphree says, "because beauty never stops."

The strains of music find their way down the stone steps and into the flower shop and Mrs. Murphree says, "The beauty of nature and music go together."

Watermelon Dates To Prehistoric Days

WATERMELON ICE CREAM

There's more to the garden variety watermelon than meets the eye or the palate.

It is difficult to conceive but the watermelon was prized by ancient Egyptians and even has been traced to prehistoric times. In arid countries it is prized for its life-sustaining liquid. In some parts of Asia the seeds are roasted for eating and Americans love their watermelon rind pickled. Watermelon also makes a delightful and refreshing ice cream and fruit ice for poppies—the children will gobble up.

WATERMELON ICE CREAM
4 cups watermelon juice, divided
5 tablespoons flour
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 cups sugar
2 eggs, slightly beaten
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice

To prepare watermelon juice, cut watermelon in cubes and rub through strainer to remove seeds (1/3 of medium watermelon yields about 4 cups juice). In large saucepan mix together flour, salt and sugar. Stir in eggs and 2 cups watermelon juice. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens enough to coat a metal spoon. Remove from heat. Cool. Stir in remaining 2 cups watermelon juice, lemon juice and heavy cream. Pour into can of 8-quart ice cream freezer. Insert dasher. Place can in freezer container. Layer crushed ice and rock salt in freezer around container according to directions for freezer. Follow manufacturer's directions for freezing ice cream. Ripen ice cream in freezer, or turn into plastic containers or bowl, cover and freeze 2 hours. Makes 4 quarts.

Note: If freezer is not large enough for 4 quarts, freeze ice cream in two batches.

WATERMELON POPSICLES
3 cups watermelon juice
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup water
2 lemons, fresh lemon juice
To prepare watermelon juice, cut watermelon into cubes and rub through a strainer to remove seeds. In small saucepan mix together sugar and water. Simmer three minutes. Remove from heat. Stir in watermelon juice and lemon juice. Turn into two ice trays. Freeze until very mushy and insert a popsicle stick in each cube. Freeze solid. Makes about 36 small popsicles.

Lunch On Wheels Or Heels

Looking for food with portability to take along on a hiking or biking trip? Here is a splendid suggestion that is perfect for lunch on wheels or heels. Appropriately called Tote'm Rolls, they are a unique new approach to the mobile meal.

For the cook interested in short cuts, this recipe takes advantage of several. The rolls are made from the refrigerated crescent variety and the filling features instant onion soup mix as the perfect seasoner. Note that the instant onion soup, used as a flavoring ingredient as it is here, is added right from the single-serving envelope to the ground beef and other ingredients. There couldn't be an easier way to put the lively flavor of onions into these delightful rolls.

The tasty filling is spooned onto the crescent dough and is then formed into little jelly-roll shapes. The ends are brought together to form a ring, but when they're baked, the center closes. They may look like the usual round poppy-seed rolls after baking, but when you bite into them the filling is a delectable surprise.

Along with some garden-fresh vegetables — carrots, celery and cucumber sticks — and a thermos of thirst-quenching iced tea, the hiker or biker will be well-nourished and ready for plenty more miles.

TOTE'M ROLLS
1 pound ground beef
2 envelopes instant onion soup
1/2 teaspoon oregano
1/4 teaspoon garlic salt
1/2 cup catsup
2 packages (8-oz. each) refrigerated crescent rolls
1 cup shredded mozzarella cheese (may substitute 1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese)
Poppy seeds

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. In medium skillet, brown ground beef; drain. Stir in instant onion soup, oregano, garlic salt and catsup; cool.

Meanwhile, separate crescent rolls into eight rectangles; seal perforations. Equally divide mixture onto lengthwise side of each rectangle; sprinkle cheese on mixture. Roll up lengthwise ends tightly, bringing ends together to form a ring. Cool on ungreased baking sheet and bake 15 minutes or until golden. Serve hot or cold. Makes eight rolls.

Marketing Suggestions

Now that the fishermen are out in force, you're perhaps looking for some different ways to prepare fish.

Fish is truly easy to prepare. All fish can be steamed, fried, boiled or poached (just like for eggs, in salted or seasoned simmering water, until fish flakes easily).

Whole fish can be stuffed and then baked. The most important thing to remember is not to overcook fish, though, or it toughens and hardens. Cook just until the fish flakes apart when tested with a fork.

Everyone needs the goodness of milk, but some folks just don't like it.

If not, then serve such things as two cups of creamed soups, one and one-third ounces of natural cheddar cheese, one cup of buttermilk, one cup pudding or milk-made custard, one and one-half cups of ice cream or one and one-third cups cottage cheese. All give the same value as a glass of milk.

If you need to ripen up fruits a bit more, until they're just eating right the way you like them, remember to ripen them at room temperature and away from the direct sunlight.

Some take two to three days while others may be ready to eat overnight.

Wash just before using is the key phrase for all the small fruits and berries available during July.

Refrigerate them "as is" and then wash just before using to keep them at their best. Leave stems on cherries too, while refrigerating, to help them keep their best quality.

Regular use of iodized salt is the most practical way to assure enough iodine in your diet and the least expensive.

Seafoods are other excellent sources of iodine, but aren't always available and are sometimes far more costly.

Successful Marinades

Marinades, to be successful, should have not only the right oil and acid balance, but should be spiced to enhance the food they bathe.

Either whole or ground spices and herbs may be used in a marinade, but, if whole spices are used, the release of their flavor should be started by heating briefly. Ground spices may be used in cold marinades, ones which needn't be heated.

In beef or lamb marinades use plenty of the luster spices — black pepper, bay leaf, thyme, cloves, caraway seed. For chicken or turkey you'll want ginger, rosemary or tarragon in addition to the usual pepper. Seafood marinades call for aromatic seeds such as dill, celery or fennel.

Often we want to marinate vegetables such as cooked green beans, potatoes to be used in a salad, cucumbers, celery etc. Here herbs are particularly good — basil, marjoram, tarragon or parsley flakes.

'Your Problems' By Ann Landers She Feels Double-Crossed

Dear Ann Landers: A while back I read a letter in your column about hyperactive children. I have a dear friend who has a hyperactive child. She refuses to admit it.

I wrote to the Assn. for Children with Learning Disabilities for information when you printed the address in the column. I asked them to send my friend some reading material and enclosed her name and address.

Guess what the organization did? They sent her MY letter along with the brochures. Now my friend refuses to speak to me on the phone. When we meet on the street she turns her head and keeps on walking.

You, Ann Landers, are supposed to help people and look what you've done! Between you and the CLD I have lost a friend of over 15 years. — Double-Crossed

Dear D.C.: Sorry about your friend, but her reaction isn't rational.

The ACLD sent the material because you asked them to. You asked them to because you wanted to help the child. Your former friend obviously does not choose to face reality and I feel sorry for her youngster.

Many Thanks

Dear Ann Landers: I am troubled by some advice you gave recently. I hope when you hear my personal story you will change your stand.

I come from a large family. My parents have inherited money. They also have many relatives and friends and didn't want to leave out anyone — so there were 700 guests at my wedding.

Ushers handed out small scrolls saying, "Thank you for the gift. It was greatly appreciated." These scrolls went to everyone. I decided it was the best way to handle it. No bride should be expected to write 700 thank-you notes.

I hope you will print my letter and reverse yourself. People put a lot of stock in what you say. — Pink Roses

Dear Rose: Sorry, dear, I don't care how many guests there were. Every person who took time and spent money on a wedding gift should have received a note of thanks in the mail.

Handing out scrolls indiscriminately, without even knowing for certain if the person had sent a gift, was in very poor taste.

Question Mark

Dear Ann: He is 41, an attractive college professor, divorced, with three children — the oldest, 15. The man has been active in "good causes" and is popular on campus. He has been in our home twice. One morning he came for breakfast and asked for a Scotch on the rocks instead of orange juice. I obliged. On his second visit he had a beer. I know nothing more about him.

Next month this man will marry my only daughter. (Her father died when she was nine. The bride is 21, a student at the college. Any advice? — Her Mother

Dear Mother: Apparently your daughter hasn't asked for your counsel and you have wisely offered none.

To you, however, all I can say is this: Your future son-in-law sounds like an alcoholic and if his bride isn't aware of his problem now, she will be before long.

Keep the door open and the latch-string out, Mother. And don't rent her room.

Confused about what's right and what's wrong in today's "new morality"? You're not alone. If you want honest, down-to-earth information on your sex questions, read Ann Landers's new booklet, "High School Sex And How To Deal With It — A Guide For Teens And Their Parents." Send 50 cents in coin plus a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Day Camp For Mother

I couldn't help eavesdropping on my children the other day when they received in the mail an application and brochure for the Martyred Mother's Day Camp.

It's a camp run annually in my neighborhood where children send their mothers for a day of swimming, relaxation and general messing around.

"What's the idea?" asked the older child.

"I'd send her to a mosquito farm at this point," he said.

"She's driving me crazy. Pick up your clothes. Make your bed. Shut the door. Turn the TV down. Wipe out the sink!"

"We should have sent her to summer school for a class in sarcasm or something."

"She should be working," said the middle one. "I know it's tough getting jobs now, but a lot of mothers in the neighborhood are doing something besides staying home bugging their kids."

"Let's fill out the application blank and see if there's room for her. What's her nickname?"

"Her real one? Sids."

"She hates that."

"Better put down Erma."

"What people or foods make her the sickest?" "We'll fill that in later. Does she float well in water?"

"It depends on what bathing suit she is wearing."

"Is she subject to dry skin, stringy hair, crying spells, blistered feet?"

"Check all those things."

"Does she have any health problems the camp should be made aware of?"

"You think we should tell them how when she sees the counter-top lined with glasses, the refrigerator door open, and crumbs floating around the water jug she goes berserk?"

"They might not take her. What about clothes?"

"We always send too many. Last year she brought home everything just as we packed it. She lives in slacks and those gold wedgies and white ankle socks."

"I'll be good for Mom to get away for awhile and be with friends her own age. We mean well, but I think we're smothering her."

I could contain myself no longer. "Does that mean I get to go to camp again this year?" I asked clapping my hands excitedly.

All three turned and looked at me soberly. "We'll see."

Dr. Lester Coleman

I know I'm a very tense person. This may account for my heart. Every once in a while I get a fluttering sensation in my heart. When this happens I'm petrified.

I am 39 and I live in terror that I will soon have a heart attack.

Mr. T.E., Ohio

The obvious answer to your problem is my own question of why you have not sought the advice of your doctor. By avoiding this, you are unnecessarily terrified and devitalized by what probably is an insignificant condition.

By avoiding such a visit and a complete examination you are allowing time to magnify your fears to the point where your personal happiness and productivity may be affected.

The heart has a delicate mechanism that acts like an electric switch to keep the heart rate regular. When special demands are made on the heart to beat faster during physical activity or times of emotional distress, the heart beat suddenly increases.

This regulatory mechanism in the heart can be disturbed by emotional tension, alcohol, caffeine, drugs and tobacco. The result is that the heart may skip a beat and cause the fluttering sensation you describe.

These extra beats, or extra "systoles," commonly occur and do not suggest a possibility of heart disease or impending heart trouble.

Nevertheless, a complete heart examination with electrocardiograms should be done. They undoubtedly will be normal and the contribution to your peace of mind will be enormous.

Far too many people of all ages live in a constant state of terror about the diseases they think they have.

Contrary to all the health education programs, these people actually avoid going to their doctors for fear of expressing the problems that have originated in their minds.

How many people have you known who, when they hear of the symptoms of another person's disease, are certain that they, too, have the same condition?

Symptoms of different disease are often so closely allied that it is impossible for the untrained person to understand their meanings.

To be liberated from fears of disease it is necessary to openly discuss all problems early, with doctors. If the psychological root of these fears is deep, it is often beneficial to seek the help through your doctor, or a psychologist or psychiatrist.

DR. LESTER COLEMAN has prepared a special booklet entitled "What to Do About Ulcers." For your copy, send 25 cents in coin and a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Lester L. Coleman, M.D., (Ulcer Booklet), P.O. Box 5176, Grand Central Station, New York City 10017. Please mention the booklet by title.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

West thought a long time about his opening lead. He finally came to the conclusion that some one could ruff a heart lead, but that East's double had to be based on one of the black aces. If he held the club ace it would keep; if he held the ace of spades, it might be important to lead to it right away.

Therefore, West opened the spade. East did hold the ace, but unfortunately it turned out that dummy was void of spades. South fanned his hand for the grand slam.

Rock Magazine On Tape For The Blind

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — Inner Views, a new rock music and youth culture magazine, doesn't have a single reader because it doesn't contain a single printed word.

"It is the first and only non-religious recorded magazine for blind young adults," says editor and publisher Dennis Holter, blind since birth.

"I had been thinking for more than a year that blind people didn't have access to lots of things sighted people do," he explained in a recent interview. "They didn't have any way to learn what their rock stars were really like. They didn't have access to finding out about stereo components and records. They couldn't read Rolling Stone magazine."

Holter knew many young blind people rely heavily on cassette tape recorders for education and music, so he selected tape as his magazine medium. He then recorded reviews and interviews with contemporary music and show business figures.

When the two-hour introductory issue was mailed in January to 100 selected blind youths across the nation, 75 subscribed immediately.

After two issues, the bimonthly audio magazine boasts a circulation of more than 200, and Holter says 800 others — a quarter of them sighted — have written expressing interest in subscribing.

He estimates there are 20,000 blind potential subscribers between the ages of 18 and 25 across the country — and many times that number of sighted persons who would prefer to hear in-depth interviews with their rock stars rather than read about them.

"We're growing at the rate of five subscriptions a day," said the 23-year-old graduate of Loyola University of Los Angeles. "The blind population is just now hearing about it. Notices are starting to appear in braille publications."

A subscription costs $6 a year, plus two cassettes, which must be mailed to Holter before he tapes each issue. It takes him an estimated 100 hours to prepare a master tape, plus copying time.

Holter, a freelance journalist, says he makes $1 per subscription, which is shared with a blind editor and a sighted secretary.

The magazine has featured interviews with rock luminaries such as the late Jim Croce, the Four Tops and the Beach Boys. And Holter says he has lined up taping sessions with blind singers Jose Feliciano and Stevie Wonder.

"We need to give blind people a chance to know blind artists," he said.

The magazine also includes an advice column called "Dear John," a joke column called "Cracking Up," pen pal listings called "Write on People," a buy-sell-swap column and a fashion column done by a sighted person.

"We want blind people to know what styles are in," Holter said. "I believe a sighted person can do a clothing description better than a blind person."

As word of the new magazine spread, subscribers began to send braille, taped or typed manuscripts of their original short stories and poems for which they are paid a penny a word. One blind woman told about her trip to Russia.

"We're not only giving blind people information about music, we're also giving them the incentive to write."

'Good Life' Goes On For Jet Set Despite Economy

NEW YORK (AP) — For Christmas, she went skiing in Vail. Then, she spent a weekend in Las Vegas en route to Arizona for a week at a tennis camp.

In April she flew off to Paris for the spring couture collections with a break at San Antonio for some skiing.

Next she jetted to Nassau for more sultry sun and returned to Vail for Easter. Later, she flew to Spain for the horse fairs, came home for awhile, and returned to Mallorca.

What about this summer? She's making plans for the Greek Islands, of course.

That's this year's schedule (so far) for one New York socialite who giggles delightedly: "I'm happiest when I'm moving around a lot."

Nan Kempner is the quintessence of today's peripatetic jet-setter whose pursuit of the good life is unaffected by economic crises or the workaday world. She's seen at the most fashionable restaurants, all the grand openings and the lavish parties that society gossip columnists cluck over.

"Someone once said living well is the best revenge. I believe in treating yourself to the best of everything you can afford or realize — buying the prettiest things, living in the best houses, developing a sense of appreciation of life. Life is wonderful," said Nan, relaxing in a bikini on the patio of her country home.

It is a modest, exquisitely furnished olive green house. But if the house is modest, the huge estate around it isn't — acres of fruit trees, flower and vegetable gardens, pine forest and swimming pool. Inside there is a cool, white-tiled bathroom with toilet paper ordered from Bloomingdale's and an ash tray inscribed: "The only thing money can't buy is poverty."

Nan, the wife of an investment banker and mother of three grown children, has the well-beeled knack of being the first kid on her block to wear the funky peasant blouse, the tiny diamonds on yards of chains, short hair, red shoes or big belts.

"I've been crazy about clothes ever since I was a little girl. My grandmother had the most wonderful sense of color and style and she would order dresses in three different colors for me," said Nan. "I like classic, tailored, very simple clothes. Dresses from wonderful material that are well cut and never go out of style."

Her favorite designer (and the rest of the jet set's) is Yves St. Laurent. But when she can't get to St. Laurent's Paris salon she goes domestic with Norell and Halston. How much does she spend? Nan's not talking. St. Laurent's silk blouses often cost as much as $450, and you have to wear something with it. An average, run-of-mill outfit by Yves runs $1,000.

"I buy more than I should and less than I'd like to," Nan remarked in her husky, rapid-fire voice. "Usually, I get a good deal from the designer but my limit is $1,000 for a dress. I really think it's obscene to spend too much on clothes."

Her good taste and style got her a job as a design consultant at Tiffany once, years ago. In 1965 she became a fashion editor at Harper's Bazaar. Then there was the recent fling at being a condominium promoter for Olympic Towers, New York's most talked about skyscraper. But she says she prefers working for her favorite charities.

"But I hate charity balls," said Nan. "They can be so deadly — unless you have a good table with fun friends."

Her "fun" friends are the elite of today's society — Nan calls them "entertaining, fun people who move around a lot. People with something to say. People who make an effort. And it doesn't hurt to look good."

Looking good for 45-year-old Nan depends on a regime she says she sticks to religiously. Once a week she goes to the same hairdresser she's been patronizing for 15 years. Oh, she occasionally switches to a current salon sensation, but she always come back. Her hair, as of this writing, is streaked blonde and worn short with bangs. It's versatile enough to be twisted into a chignon the size of a mushroom at the nape of her neck.

She has a facial once a month, "but I think we're all kidding ourselves. When it goes, it goes," sighed Nan. Once a year she visits her friendly plastic surgeon to be checked out. So far he hasn't put the knife to her, but she says one of these years a face lift is inevitable.

Nan is a stick-slim size six but eats with unabashed gusto. During the interview lunch she apologized but enthusiastically slurped her watercress soup and dipped her fingers in her companion's oozing Brie cheese. Her masseur, who she calls "the Greek sadist," pummels away at incipient bulges once a week.

"I'm happy I wasn't born beautiful," said Nan. "I've seen what it does to other women. My father once said I had the face of a monkey but that if I had a good figure, good carriage, did things, and had a lot to say, I'd be all right."

She's been married to Thomas Kempner for 23 years.

Kempner often prefers to stay at home while Nan wills off to parties and resorts.

"Togetherness kills a marriage," said Nan. "We never get bored with each other because we each have our

Two Seek Permits For Water Projects

DETROIT — The Lake Michigan Yacht club of New Buffalo and a South Haven man have applied for permits for pier and anti-erosion construction projects, according to the Army's corps of engineers.

The yacht club has applied to the corps' Chicago office for permission to replace an existing wooden dock and piers with reinforced concrete dock and 25 steel piers along its property in New Buffalo.

The 881-foot-long dock will be four inches thick and will have attached to it 25 adjustable piers, according to a statement from the engineers.

South Haven, Charles J. McNeal, 11 Chippewa court, has asked approval of an anti-erosion riprap protected fill offshore of Indian Grove subdivision.

In his application to the corps' Detroit office, McNeal is proposing to build a 30-foot-long fill of reinforced concrete blocks weighing 3,200 pounds each, to be backfilled with sand, according to plans released by the engineers.

Area residents have 30 days from July 7 to make written objections to the New Buffalo project to the Chicago office of the corps of engineers, and 30 days from July 10 to make written objections to the South Haven project to the Detroit office of the engineers, the announcements said.

Allied Prices 'Have' To Be Raised

OPEN DAILY 10-10; SUNDAY 11-6
WED., THURS.,
FRI., SAT.
ONLY

DETROIT (AP) — Allied Supermarkets, owner of Wrigley and K Mart Food Stores, says it will have to raise prices to make up for a huge state tax increase expected under the governor's business tax revision.

Company chairman Thomas McMaster said taxes on Allied Supermarkets would almost double from $480,000 a year at present, to about $855,000 under Gov. William Milliken's proposal.

In an interview Tuesday, McMaster said the firm does about $350 million a year in business in Michigan. Spreading the tax increase over the entire product line would require a price hike of under two-tenths of a per cent.

McMaster said similar but smaller tax increases would be incurred by competing retail food chains, which presumably also would have to raise prices.

But he said the tax is "particularly onerous" to Allied because its corporate headquarters are in Michigan. An Allied spokesman said the company believes Kroger, which is based in Cincinnati, would be hit with a Michigan tax increase of only 40 to 60 per cent.

Allied is the largest retail food chain with headquarters in Michigan, but does not have the largest share of the Michigan market. The firm has stores in 25 states.

Under Gov. William Milliken's proposal, eight existing business taxes would be combined into a single tax based on sales, payroll and profits.

McMaster said Allied would be taxed on payroll at its corporate headquarters even though employees there are working on the entire company, including parts in other states.

He said this would create "an economic disadvantage for Michigan-based food chains."

McMaster also complained that chains like Allied will be hit by higher percentage tax increases than small, independent operations because the chains have a relatively larger and better-paid workforce.

In a letter this week to members of the state Senate, he urged drastic overhaul or defeat of the governor's tax package.

"We, as the leading Michigan-based food chain serving the major population centers including the inner cities with competitively low food prices, find it inconceivable that the state Legislature could even contemplate tax increases that will result in higher food prices at this economic crisis in Michigan's history," McMaster wrote.

The tax revision passed the House recently and is in the Senate Taxation Committee. Critics have complained it lowers taxes on heavy industry — including the auto makers and utilities — while increasing levies on small businesses, professional people and retail firms.

The bill is considered likely to pass, however, because it includes a change in tax-collection procedures that would provide a one-time windfall to the state of $180 million that is believed needed to balance the 1975-76 budget.

Cash For Exodus Not 'Serious' Plan

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A plan to pay welfare recipients $5,000 to get out of Michigan was never seriously considered by state officials, says John Dempsey, director of Michigan's Social Services Department.

"There is no such plan," Dempsey said Tuesday. "There is certainly no such program floating around in this department."

The idea of "assistance grants" to help unemployed Michigan workers find jobs in other states surfaced at a brainstorming session July 7, Dempsey said.

At that time, Dempsey said, Wilbur Cohen, former U.S. Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, suggested the cash payment idea might be worth consideration.

But after further discussion among Cohen, Dempsey and William J. Cochran, coordinator of the specially appointed Michigan Economic Action Committee, Dempsey said, the group realized there would be too many problems with cash grants.

"What if someone came in and said 'I need $2,000 to go look for a job in another state,' and he came back two months later without one?" Dempsey asked.

The $5,000 payments — about what some people on welfare receive annually — might also be illegal or in conflict with U.S. Supreme Court rulings on welfare residency, Dempsey said.

"I can't see how the federal government would contribute money for any one state to pay money to send people to another state," Dempsey said. "And what if another state offered $6,000 for people to leave there?"

A report that a group of economic experts was considering the $5,000 plan was made in a speech last week by Dr. Daniel Kruger, chairman of the Michigan Manpower Council.

Kruger, a professor of industrial relations at Michigan State University, told the Michigan Press Association that Michigan is expecting about 100,000 new welfare enrollees in the next six months.

Economy Beginning Long Climb

WASHINGTON (AP) — The latest government statistics show the economy has apparently started what is widely expected to be a long climb out of its deepest recession since World War II.

The first increase in nine months in the output of the nation's factories, mines and utilities was reported Tuesday and administration economists called it encouraging but not surprising.

The Federal Reserve Board said its index of industrial production advanced four-tenths of 1 per cent in June, recording the biggest increase since the six-tenths of 1 per cent rise in May 1974.

While not conclusive in itself, "in conjunction with other evidence we are seeing, it is pretty clear evidence the economy is starting to recover," said James L. Pate, top economist of the Commerce Department.

House Planning New CIA Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is expected to replace its disension-torn intelligence committee with a new panel headed by Rep. Otis G. Pike.

Pike, a New York Democrat who headed the House inquiry on the Pueblo affair, was understood to be the choice of speaker Carl Albert.

The effort to abolish the committee was led by Rep. James H. Quillen, R-Tenn., who said reorganizing the body would be "an official license to go on a witch hunt."

Meanwhile, Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Senate intelligence committee, said, "We have to face the possibility the CIA might have acted as a rogue elephant ragging out of control. That might be the way the evidence turns out."

In a separate interview in the Baltimore Sun, Church was quoted as saying: "There is very serious doubt about whether the president or the oversight committees — the chain of command controlling covert actions — were ever told" about CIA assassination planning.

He also said his panel has found no evidence to support charges that the CIA had infiltrated the White House or other government agencies.

The House is debating a resolution, approved by the House Rules Committee to abolish the existing 10-member select committee and replace it with a 13-member one with an identical mandate.

Albert also was understood to have decided not to appoint Rep. Lucien N. Neitzl, D-Mich., and Rep. Michael J. Harrington, D-Mass., to the new committee, but otherwise put eight of the current members back on the new committee.

The select committee was set up by the House in February to investigate U.S. intelligence agencies. But the committee was embroiled in dissent from the start, and became deadlocked last month when five committee Democrats tried to force Neitzl to resign.

Meanwhile, there were these developments:

—Church and Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., the vice chairman of the Senate committee, differed over when and how the panel's report on alleged CIA involvement in assassinations would be made public.

—Tower said the report would not be made public until September and only after a vote of the full Senate. Church insisted the committee had the power to release the report on its own and that this would be done as soon as it is ready.

—L. Fletcher Prouty denied a news report that he had acknowledged the possibility of incorrectly identifying former presidential aide Alexander Butterfield as the CIA contact man at the White House.

The Springfield, Mass., Daily News quoted Prouty as saying he may have been wrong and that he may have been told that Butterfield was the agency's contact man "to cover up the real" contact man.

Prouty said Tuesday, however, that the account was erroneous and that he stands by his original story. The newspaper also said it was standing by its account of an interview with Prouty.

CBS News reported Tuesday that E. Howard Hunt and Robert Bennett, both former employees with the public relations firm of Mullen & Co., denied telling Prouty anything about Butterfield. Prouty has said his information about Butterfield came from the two Mullen men.

Panel Probes Needless Surgery

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the winter of 1969, Mrs. Marie Valenzuela of Woodlawn, Calif., was told her daughter, who had a fever, needed her tonsils removed.

Before this doctor was finished, he had removed the tonsils of four of her children and those of a niece, Mrs. Valenzuela told a House subcommittee.

The operation caused complications for one of her daughters, including a burst main artery to the brain, pneumonia and hepatitis, and put Mrs. Valenzuela into the hospital suffering shock over the condition of her child.

The story was related Tuesday to a House Commerce investigations subcommittee looking into unnecessary surgery.

recovered, her health and received $2,000 in a malpractice settlement. The other children each received several hundred dollars. In each case, a court ruled the tonsillectomies had not been needed, she told the House panel.

Dr. Sidney M. Wolfe told the panel that as many as 3.2 million surgical operations may be performed needlessly each year in the United States. Wolfe, director of the Ralph Nader-affiliated Public Citizen's Health Research group, said that 16,000 deaths occur as a result and that as many as 100 children may be dying each year because of tonsillectomies that should never have been performed.

The cost to patients for unnecessary surgery may be as high as $4.8 billion a year, Wolfe testified.

The subcommittee is looking into how many operations performed each year are done needlessly, how many people die as a result and the cost to the American public. Tuesday's hearing was the first of three the panel plans to hold.

Wolfe's figures came from a 1973 study of surgery performed on members of two New York City unions.

The New York City survey shows a 17.6 per cent rate of unnecessary operations. If 17.6 per cent of the 18.4 million operations done in this country

Anesthesiologists Accept Insurance

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — Major surgical operations were conducted as usual Tuesday after anesthesiologists here decided at the last minute to accept state-sponsored multiple practice insurance.

The Kalamazoo Academy of Medicine's members announced April 13 a surgical cutoff would occur July 15 unless coverage was available.

Anesthesiologists decided Monday night to accept immigration into this country of foreign medical graduates, which may represent 25 to 35 per cent of the U.S. surgical profession by 1980-85.

Wolfe recommended a program of independent review by specialists before any patient undergoes surgery. He said this would expose the patient to doctors who would not benefit monetarily if the surgery were performed and also would provide another opinion on possible alternative medical treatment.

The subcommittee resumes its hearing Thursday.

PSC Head Asked To Testify In Rate Case

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — State Public Service Commission Chairman William Rosenberg has been subpoenaed to testify on his alleged abuse of influence in a Consumers Power Co. rate case.

Genesee County Prosecutor Robert Leonard subpoenaed Rosenberg Tuesday to testify in the rate case. Leonard said he will question the PSC chairman about his conversations with a consultant who recommended Consumers Power customers pay the costs of the Marysville natural gas reforming plant.

The consultant, A. James Moll of the Stanford Research Institute, has testified he included the recommendation in a study only after Rosenberg urged him on two occasions to do so. The recommendation later was discredited by the other two PSC members.

The utility estimated the plant would cost $50 million, but cost overruns drove the final figure up to $155.9 million.

The company has requested a $36 million a year rate hike from the state, of which roughly $30 million would be used to cover the Marysville plant.

The subpoena also demands that Rosenberg produce "any and all books, memos or other documents in your (Rosenberg's) possession...evidencing any and all communication...between yourself and A. James Moll."

Leonard, who has intervened in the rate case, said he may move to disqualify Rosenberg after hearing his testimony.

Leonard said he wants to determine if Rosenberg conspired with Consumers Power to pass along all the Marysville costs to its customers.

Customers already are paying for $120 million of the plant and Consumers Power wants its customers to pick up the other $35 million.

Rosenberg would have to vote on the rate increase if he remains as PSC chairman, but he is under consideration for a federal energy post in Washington.

"We want to determine exactly what Rosenberg and Moll were doing and how the recommendation was made," said Leonard.

Moll testified he repeatedly told Rosenberg that the consultant's recommendation to have the customers bear the costs of Marysville was outside the scope of the study.

Commissioners Lenton Sculthorpe and William Halls both said the recommendation did not belong in the report.

The Marysville reforming plant would convert certain petroleum byproducts into natural gas.

GOP Battle Shaping Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — A battle for the 1976 Republican presidential nomination is one step closer after formation of a committee to aid former California Gov. Ronald Reagan in a possible challenge to President Ford.

Although Reagan said again he won't make a decision until later this year, the chairman of the new committee, Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., said Tuesday that its members wouldn't have joined unless they were virtually certain the former California governor would run.

chairman of MDA, and hundreds of Skate-A-Thons are being held across the country in his name.

The Lakeshore Skating center Skate-A-Thon will start at 1 p.m. Aug. 5 and continue until 1 a.m. Wednesday, Aug. 6.

A skater enters the Skate-A-Thon by paying an entry fee, then skates for 50 minutes of every hour after obtaining sponsors to pay a specified amount for every hour he skates. He then donates money from sponsors to MDA which will use it for research and care of muscular dystrophy patients. Howard and Diane Harris of Lakeshore Skating center noted: "Skate-A-Thons are a lot of fun, but more importantly, they help the hundreds of thousands afflicted by dreadful muscle wasting diseases."

Lakeshore Skating center opened last December and this is its first participation in a Skate-A-Thon.

MDA supports more than 275 neuromuscular disease research projects in laboratories throughout the U.S. and in 16 foreign countries. It has recently established a network of university-based research centers to accelerate efforts to find cures or effective treatments for neuromuscular disease.

Robert L. Hickman, president of the Southwest Michigan Chapter of Muscular Dystrophy Association, said 67 dystrophy patients are served by the chapter in Berrien, Allegan, Cass, Van Buren and St. Joseph counties.

Hickman said area dystrophy drives, conducted by 68 fire departments and other civic organizations, have raised $536,832 since 1952 in the fight against the dread disease.

"We welcome the assistance this year provided by Howard and Diane Harris of Lakeshore Skating center," Hickman added.

Trophies will be awarded for obtaining the most sponsors and raising the most money along with free rink passes for those completing prescribed distances.

Prosecutors agreed to drop charges of conspiracy against Hickey and Velton Brooks, who also pleaded no contest in the Wayne County Circuit Court appearance. Judge Theodore Bohn said he would pass sentence Aug. 26.

Holiday Spirit Was The Same In 1849

By JOHN DYE
South Berrien Bureau

"They found the old vacant cabin with a large hole burned in the center of the floor. A brown of brush soon made it fit, and all sat to a sumptuous feast — a pot luck."

"After an hour or two of recreation on the beach of Lake Michigan, and a ride on an improvised raft, the horn sounded. Mr. Gross attached the 4 ox motor to the slide, cracked his woodchuck lashed whip and hit the trail for 'Home-Sweet-Home' where they arrived in due time."

That's part of the description of a July 4 celebration marked by a handful of residents from the South Haven area. If the description doesn't quite conform to the celebrations marked by South Haven residents recently, it's not unusual.

The account was penned by Clark Pierce and noted the July 4 celebration of 1949, marking the nation's 73rd birthday.

Pierce's recollections are contained in a collection of letters owned by Mrs. Charles (Beverly) Russell of 1010 Rose Hill road, Berrien Springs. She is the great, great granddaughter of Clark Pierce.

"I was reminiscing with my parents (Mr. and Mrs. Burnham Hammond of Hartford) and got out my scrapbook. We reread this story. Because of the bicentennial, I thought it might be of some interest," Mrs. Russell said.

Pierce's story is recounted in a letter written by Mrs. Russell's grandmother, Myrtle Pierce Hammond of Hartford, that was written in February of 1943.

In her letter, Mrs. Hammond started her account of Pierce's description of the national holiday of many years ago: "July 4, 1849 a long slide or stone boat drawn by two yokes of oxen stopped at the home of Clark Pierce. Christian B. Gross was chief teamster; his wife and baby Byron rode in the slide; with them were Mason Wood, his wife and four children, Daniel, Harriet, and the twins Polk and Dallas, who lived 2 miles south of Bangor. An old hunter named 'Beard' joined them; also, the four young Pierce children: Almon, Irving, Laura and Quincy. The cavalcade started for the 'mouth of the Black river' to celebrate the 73rd anniversary of American independence. Even if the celebration marked in 1849 lacked many of the many modern conveniences of today's age, Pierce summed up the occasion with sentiments still shared by some in the 1970's:

"Not a firecracker cracked, not a drunk person, no air polluted by tobacco smoke; the same money in our pockets that we had in the morning."

Guerrillas Slug It Out

LUANDA, Angola (AP) — One of Angola's warring nationalist armies controlled most of Angola's capital today, but Portuguese military authorities said a rival guerrilla army of 3,000 men might be preparing to advance on the city. After a week of nightly fighting in which an estimated 300 persons have been killed and about 1,000 wounded, Agostinho Neto's Soviet-backed Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola, or MPLA, had driven Holden Roberto's fighters of the National Front for the Liberation of Angola, or FNLA, from all but a few pockets of the port city on the Atlantic Ocean.

Congress Has 5 Days To Act On Ford Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is edging toward final action on the first part of its energy program while President Ford prepares to ask the lawmakers to let U.S. oil prices rise. With energy matters occupying most of the time of the Senate and House, Ford planned to add more to the agenda today by submitting his plan to gradually raise the government-controlled price on most U.S.-produced oil.

That will bring Ford into sharp conflict with the heavily Democratic Congress. The administration's energy plan is based on cutting consumption by sharply raising fuel prices while the Democrats are pushing for mandatory conservation and lower prices.

In a related development, Senate hearings begin today on the recent increase in gasoline prices. Federal Energy Administrator Frank G. Zarb is the first witness followed by oil company executives Thursday.

On the eve of the hearings, the FEA announced it is expanding its monitoring of retail gasoline prices to assure compliance with FEA price regulations. The agency also said the nation's largest oil companies expect to be able to meet summer gasoline demand.

The Senate planned to act today on a bill to roll back to $11.28 a barrel the price of "new" oil — the amount of U.S. production that exceeds 1972 levels. That oil, about 30 percent of U.S. production, is now free from price controls and sells for an average of more than $12 a barrel. "Old" oil sells for the controlled price of $5.25.

The administration plan, to be submitted today by Ford, calls for raising that price ceiling to $13.50 over the next 30 months. Administration officials contend this would force fuel conservation while giving oil producers incentive to find more petroleum.

The Ford plan will go into effect unless either the House or Senate blocks it within five working days. Ford predicts his plan would raise gasoline prices by seven cents a gallon by January 1978. The Senate Interior Committee says a 15-cent hike is a better estimate. Meanwhile, Congress took these actions Tuesday:

—The Senate passed, 62 to 29, and sent to the House a bill extending the government's authority to control oil prices through March 1, 1976. The current authority will expire Aug. 31.

—The Senate approved on a 63-21 vote a bill requiring auto makers to increase the average fuel efficiency of new cars to 21 miles per gallon by 1980 and 28 mpg by 1985. The current average is 14 mpg. The House has approved a similar bill.

Senate Approves 'Bureaucracy' Bill

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The state Senate has approved a bill designed to give lawmakers a better handle on the state's sprawling bureaucracy.

The measure, passed 34-2 Tuesday and sent to the House, would permit the legislature to pass judgment on every rule and regulation established by state agencies and departments. Such rules — some 12,000 a year — range from technical guidelines to near-policy decisions on major laws.

Critics of the bill, who tried for a compromise to keep rule consideration in a special committee, said it could bog the legislature down.

The bill would give the Joint Committee on Administrative Rules the power to reject rules submitted by state agencies. But if it approved them, it would have to submit a resolution for approval to the full legislature.

The House and Senate would have 14 days to act on the rules — approving or rejecting them — or they would take effect automatically. The 14-day limit is to be used as a valve to prevent huge backlogs from occurring.

The bill also would give opponents of new laws another chance to fight them. By sparking debates over rules to implement controversial new laws, opponents may win battles they lost in voting on the bills themselves.

Currently, the rules committee can approve rules or take no action. In which case they go into effect. To reject them, the committee must submit a resolution to the legislature, which must act on it within 30 days.

Thus the legislature does not see thousands of rules which the bureaucracy drafts to implement laws and which are approved in committee.

Backers of the bill argued it would give lawmakers a better grasp on state government. The legislature, they contended, must retain control and exercise the responsibility it was elected to hold.

A critic, majority floor leader Sen. Daniel Cooper, D-Oak Park, said:

"We'll be here an extra five or ten hours a week."

THERE are more pleasant ways to spend a Saturday afternoon than being tossed around the arena as aspiring matador Antonio Guerra of Madrid will tell you. Guerra escaped unhurt.

Rep. O'Hara Eyes Senate Seat

DETROIT (AP) — Michigan Congressman James G. O'Hara has told the state's county Democratic chairmen he will be a candidate for the U.S. Senate in 1978.

O'Hara, becomes the second Democrat to tell party leaders he will seek the post, which will be vacated by Democratic Sen. Phil Hart, who is retiring at the end of his third term. The other is Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley. Congressman Donald Riegle of Flint has been meeting with potential supporters to see if he has the backing needed to put up an effective campaign for the Senate.

Michigan Secretary of State Richard Austin also has indicated interest in making a run for the job.

In his letter to local party chairmen, O'Hara said: "I wanted to let you know that I will soon be announcing my candidacy for the United States Senate seat being vacated by Phil Hart.

"I have been meeting with Democratic leaders for the past several weeks and hope to travel extensively throughout Michigan during the next month to get advice, opinions, and hopefully, the support of Democratic rank and file and of the party leadership."

O'Hara, 49, represents the 12th district, which is centered in Macomb County and includes most of the city of Warren. He has reportedly told friends that his 16 years in the House of Representatives was long enough and that the Senate would be a chance to do more in government.

He is also said to believe he has the best chance of winning the crucial suburban white collar vote.

A World War II paratrooper, O'Hara later became an attorney and was first elected to the House in 1956. He later became a founding member of the liberal Democratic Study Group in the House and its chairman in 1967 and 1968.

Despite his defection from liberal ranks in the 1970s to oppose school busing for racial integration, he has retained a strong liberal voting record according to ratings by the liberal Americans for Democratic Action and conservative Americans for Constitutional Action.

He has been a strong supporter of legislation endorsed by organized labor.

Don't Overdo It, Says Woodcock

WASHINGTON (AP) — United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock said Tuesday greater emphasis on small car production is a key move in achieving over-all fuel efficiency.

But, Woodcock warned a congressional committee, too much emphasis on small cars can produce disadvantages.

"Because many people have a real need for larger cars, he explained, 'consumer response might be a slower replacement of the less efficient cars now in use.'

Woodcock told a Senate Finance Committee hearing that mandatory U.S. standards are needed to raise gasoline mileage because the nation "cannot rely upon mere assurances or voluntary commitments" for this from the nation's auto industry.

"We have seen ranges in that direction before, and they have proved short-lived," Woodcock testified in prepared remarks.

"The small cars get progressively bigger and heavier."

"The American consumer undoubtedly will want more fuel efficient cars, and Congress must make sure that the domestic auto manufacturers will make such cars available."

The UAW president contended, however, that the achievement should be based on achieving improvements in overall fuel efficiency related to each manufacturer's average production rather than to its individual models.

Woodcock said such a move would result in fewer layoffs, would not be as costly to new car buyers and would be less disruptive to the nation's economy.

FOR THE British there was little doubt that the American uprising was a serious rebellion. The war had spread from the confines of Massachusetts and with the capture of Ft. Ticonderoga, May 10, 1775, New York was involved. Ft. Ticonderoga changed hands several times during the war but not before its capture was hailed off across the snow-covered mountains to be used in the American siege of Boston, 1775 to 1776. The World Almanac notes.

Sometime in the mid-1960s I made my first — and last — address to a large assembly of the League of Women Voters. The general subject as I recall was the interaction between President and Congress, the Congressional leadership structure, and the emergence of public policy. The address was well received, but in the question period the balloon went up. A woman rose and asked: "Don't you think it is appalling that, according to a recent poll, 73 per cent did not know the name of the Secretary of Defense?"

My reply was that most people were busy trying to raise families and make a living so they relied on the division of labor; that is, they elected Dwight Eisenhower President and assumed he would recall the name of his Secretary of Defense. This seeming display of anti-intellectualism and a pull over the audience, which became positively overpowering as I proceeded to dig myself deeper into the pit, pointing out that every rational organization had to rely on the division of labor. Nobody could be expected to know everything about every critical decision as they turned to opinion leaders for guidance. I pointed out that despite my PhD, I didn't know beans about a lot of controversial issues; but I knew whose leadership to accept in support of the liberal position. Politicians like Earl Douglas, Estes Kefauver, Hubert Humphrey were, so to speak, my "opinion trustees."

Nothing said here designed to impugn the good works of the League of Women Voters. The problem is that the League in its conscientious fashion is "in search of conclusions. The politician is in quest of decisions, and the two can rarely be achieved simultaneously. And I only mention the League because it seems to me that the major problem with the present House of Representatives, and the Senate to a lesser degree, is that it is behaving like an educational institution and not a political body."

Take the energy debate as a case in point. I supposed that an ideal world every Representative and Senator should take a few months off to school himself in the arcane dimensions of the problem. Once as an expert he could then gather with his fellow experts and evolve a conclusive energy program. The result would be predictable: like a faculty meeting where everybody does think of himself as a universalist, an agreed upon consensus might emerge by the year 2000. However, if I think you have no time and less interest in becoming an energy expert, but want to prevent a consumer rip-off, you make an appointment with Senator Henry M. Jackson and his staff. He is your "opinion trustee."

Congress has always worked this way — and undoubtedly will again once the hyperbolic theory of democracy wears out the would-be universalists; — but it just happens that the enormous inflow of new blood in the current session has left members without established "opinion trustees." It takes a while to figure out that Representative X or Senator Y really knows a topic inside out and shares your general philosophy, whether liberal or conservative. When the crunch comes, you will then look to him or her for leadership.

Now I happen to be one of those who believes that, by and large, the American people get a better Congress than they deserve. In the course of my years as spokesman for the Americans for Democratic Action and later as an official of the Johnson Administration, I got to know and respect a large number of Senators and Representatives.

For instance, I had long considered the late Louisiana Senator Allen Ellender a racist fool. A racist he was, but after watching him at a meeting of the Senate Agriculture Committee, literally demolish a number of allegedly expert witnesses on some subsidy measure, I realized that he probably knew more about our particular policy than the Secretary of Agriculture.

BURNS HIMSELF TO DEATH Man Dies On Flying Jet

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A Miami man entered a restroom aboard an airborne National Airlines jumbo jet, doused himself with a flammable liquid and lit it, police say.

Officers said the man, identified by the airline as Anthony G. Townsend, 24, was severely burned and was dead by the time the DC10 made an unscheduled landing at Jacksonville late Tuesday.

None of the other 57 passengers aboard Flight 1601, enroute to Miami from New York's Kennedy International Airport, was injured, police said.

"The restroom was charred from the intense heat, but there was no indication the plane was ever in danger," said Jacksonville police spokesman Robert Morgan.

No suicide note was discovered, but police said Townsend's body was found slumped over newspapers which he apparently had spread on the floor to aid in starting the blaze.

Townsend had also stuffed his shirt into the sink and a coat into the toilet, apparently to seal the room off, officers said.

Police said they could not immediately determine the type of liquid used in what they described as an apparent self-immolation. They said it might have been a can of lighter fluid.

But Mike Clark, a spokesman for National, said it could have been an alcoholic beverage. He said he didn't think a volatile liquid could have been taken aboard because of preflight security measures.

Jacksonville police said that although Townsend suffered severe burns, the cause of death was initially listed as smoke inhalation. An autopsy was pending, they said.

The fire was discovered by a stewardess who opened the restroom door for another passenger, 7-year-old Karen Piarro of Miami Beach, Fla., said Anthony Piarro, the child's father.

"The stewardess opened the door and flames shot out," said Piarro, who with the other passengers completed the trip to Miami aboard an Eastern Air Lines flight. "We all rushed to the front of the plane."

Another passenger, George Pizarro of Miami, also said there was some panic when the flames shot out.

"There was a flash of light," Pizarro said. "Stewardesses came running down the aisle, shouting. Tell the captain, tell the captain, and the other passengers kind of panicked a little."

Pizarro said stewardesses worked fire extinguishers for five or 10 minutes to douse the flames.

Clark said the flight was over Wilmington, N.C., when the fire was discovered. He said the pilot, Capt. Joseph Stewart, elected to land at Jacksonville because it was the nearest large airport.

Strike Bill Is Delayed

test of Fitzgerald's six-month-old leadership. Since Thursday, he has been a vote or two short of the majority needed to amend the bill. And, Democrats had only single-vote margins Tuesday when they won procedural motions to delay discussion of the bill, giving Fitzgerald more time to search for the elusive votes.

Republicans need only to keep Democrats from getting those 20 votes, but failed to get the quick consideration they wanted.

"We're closer than we were this morning," Fitzgerald said late Tuesday.

One Democrat, who voted with the Republicans last week, reported a "dialogue" with Fitzgerald includes the "whole gamut" of political pressure, including threats against his legislative and committee effectiveness. He said he is "holding firm" with a small group of Democrats who want to restrict strikes.

Under the bill, teachers and school boards would be penalized with loss of money when the strike threatens 180 days of classes. When 170 days are in jeopardy, court injunction would be sought to open classroom doors and mediation, arbitration or further bargaining would be ordered.

The measure would require school to end by the second Friday in June. In some cases, districts and their teachers could suffer immediate economic penalties if a strike occurred.

SJ Conspiracy Hearing Delayed evidence Monday during the testimony of William D. Hill, president, Beaudoin-Stueland president.

Other records introduced Monday indicated that while Soo Surplus apparently shipped a huge industrial circuit breaker to Clark Equipment, Benton township, at a cost of $6,400, it was different from the circuit breaker actually installed at the Clark plant.

Yesterday's documents alleged that the $6,400 check to Soo Surplus was deposited in Lanphear's checking account.

Then on Jan. 13 of this year, three days after the Beaudoin-Stueland check was dated, Lanphear wrote two personal checks.

A check for $300 was made out to Gary Borcham, reportedly the 13 or 14-year-old son of James Borcham, who at the time was Beaudoin-Stueland president. A handwritten memo on the check states: "Equipment purchase." The check was endorsed by both Gary and James Borcham and cashed, markings on the back indicated.

On the same day a check for $3,757.50 was made out to McCoy by Lanphear, the evidence showed.

A second group of documents which were introduced also tied in with earlier testimony by President Hill.

He testified about documents which allegedly showed that while Beaudoin-Stueland installed three circuit breakers at Superior Steel Castings Co., Benton Harbor, the contractor purchased four circuit breakers.

Two were bought from a West Virginia dealer for $6,713, evidence indicated, and two were bought for $11,972 from Soo Surplus.

Bank records yesterday cited that Lanphear deposited a check from Beaudoin-Stueland to Soo Surplus in his account after July 10, 1974, the date on the check. On July 12 he wrote a personal check for $7,972 to McCoy and a check for $2,000 to be deposited in his (Lanphear's), savings account.

This second group of documents was apparently introduced in connection with one of the counts against the trio. All three charges occurred allegedly involve events that occurred between June of 1974 and January of 1975.

Defendants are also charged with getting $6,000 for 200 vapor lights. Documents introduced yesterday apparently did not relate to this charge.

After the hearing Johnston estimated that 20 more documents will probably be introduced as evidence in the case.

Apollo Heading For Link

vehicles. Stafford and Leonov will embrace in a heralded "handshake in the sky."

The Americans carried the docking module into space Tuesday and extracted it from the spent booster rocket without difficulty.

For two days, astronauts and cosmonauts will visit the others' space quarters, sharing their food and conducting scientific and medical experiments. They will also exchange gifts, flags and letters from leaders of the two nations.

For the first time since Russia got the jump on America in space with the launching of Sputnik in 1957, the two nations were linked in cooperation scientifically and in a cosmic display of detente.

Today's timetable called for the Soyuz cosmonauts to maneuver their capsule to a 140-mile-high orbit and the Apollo crew to check out the docking module systems.

A test of the Soyuz television link with Apollo mission control also was scheduled.

The tiny capsules were rocketed flawlessly into orbit Tuesday from spaceports half a world apart.

The Apollo launch followed the Soviet blastoff by seven and a half hours and matched it for perfection.

"Zingoo! We're right in there!" whooped Stafford, the Apollo commander, as the ship streaked from the Florida launch site into a ballseye orbital path.

"Everything is perfect," the ebullient Leonov reported as the Soyuz blazed away from the previously super-secret Baikor Cosmodrome, 1,400 miles southeast of Moscow.

Shortly after launch, Stafford announced in Russian, "Moe nahodimsia na orbito (We are in orbit)."

Television viewers around the world witnessed the twin launches, for the first time seeing live the blastoff of a Soviet spaceship.

Residents Asked To Water Sod

Shoreham residents who have leach stations near their property are asked to water newly installed sod, officials of Barger Engineering said last night at the village council meeting.

Leach stations are storm water collection facilities. Thirteen leach stations have been ordered and construction has started. The contractor, Balkema, Inc. of Portage has landscaped with sod around each of the stations. Occasional sprinkling will insure the sod taking hold.

The village council will start mowing weeds off empty lots, President John Hiesley announced. Arrangements to have lots mowed is underway and weeds will be cut shortly.

development at Eau Claire.

Drawbacks are lack of fully serviced, free standing sites and available locations in south county, the report says.

"Among" minuses are a tendency for Berrien county to bad mouth itself, particularly "the physical deterioration of the City of Benton Harbor and its attendant social problems."

Other minuses reported by Fantus:

- High turnover rates and absenteeism in existing industries.

Birth Control Debate Opens

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The state Senate has started debating a politically explosive bill to permit teaching birth control in public schools. Arguments opened Tuesday but quickly bogged down over a minor amendment. Without getting to the heart of the controversial bill, the Senate broke off debate in confusion. The amendment was offered by Sen. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, who said it would make teaching birth control voluntary. After debate, he indicated it was not relevant to the purpose of the bill. Nevertheless, the amendment is expected to be reconsidered today. The bill would remove current prohibitions on teaching birth control in health education classes. It would require the state Board of Education to establish guidelines on birth control, sex hygiene and venereal disease for classroom teaching. The class would be an elective and students who do not participate would not be lose credits toward graduation.

Taxpayer Political Checkoff In Big Trouble At Lansing

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A legislator says he will attempt to kill public financing provisions of Common Cause's political reform bill because most taxpayers oppose the idea.

The amendment by state Rep. Alfred Sheridan, D-Taylor, would wipe out the voluntary $2 taxpayer checkoff for gubernatorial races.

Public financing is one provision in the comprehensive 71-page bill to regulate political activities scheduled for more debate today in the House.

A similar system of voluntary taxpayer checkoffs is in effect at the federal level, but Sheridan said "the people are against it, only 23 per cent of the taxpayers have taken advantage of it."

The provision would allow public financing in a primary election of $2 out of every $3 spent by major party candidates for governor and $3 of every $4 spent in a general election.

Meanwhile Tuesday, Rep. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, objected to a clause forcing minor parties to disclose the identities of their contributors. Bullard said the minor parties should not be forced to do so and promised an attempt to delete the requirement.

Bullard said police agencies would use minor party contributors lists to identify supposed radicals.

"The reason for disclosure is to obtain a picture of people who might have special influence in government," said Bullard. "In the case of minor parties, they more than likely won't be coming into power so there is no reason to require disclosure."

The measure requires listing the names and addresses of anyone contributing more than $15 to a political party or candidate.

One amendment tacked onto the bill during debate Tuesday would require candidates and political organizations to identify themselves on all campaign literature.

The House debated the bill with Michigan Common Cause executive director Doug Ross observing from the spectators gallery.

One Common Cause critic, Rep. Quincy Hoffman, R-Applegate, suggested the House erect a rear-view mirror at Ross in the gallery so legislators could coordinate their votes with Common Cause wishes.

Common Cause drafted the legislation with Republican and Democratic legislative leaders. The leaders pledged, under threat of a statewide referendum campaign, to have the bill on its way to the governor before summer recess.

Under the bill individual campaign contribution limits would be $1,700 to gubernatorial candidates, $450 to state Senate candidates and $250 in state House races.

Maximum expenditures in a single election would be $1 million for gubernatorial candidates, $30,000 for state senators and $15,000 for state representatives.

Lobbyists would be required to file expense reports with the state for public inspection once every two months.

All candidates, their spouses and children would be required to disclose their major sources of income.

Rape Victim Is Sought

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Washtenaw County deputies captured a man who allegedly tried to rape a young woman at Knifepoint Tuesday. Now, officers say, they're looking for the victim. The incident occurred at Washtenaw County's Killen Pond. Witnesses told police they heard a commotion, saw the alleged attack and grabbed the assailant, wrestling a knife away from him. The attacker was held until sheriff's deputies arrived, but they were unable to find the young woman who was allegedly attacked. Police speculate that she may have run to a nearby road and thumbed a ride.

Early July Sales Strong

DETROIT (AP) — Sales of U.S.-built cars in early July were the strongest for the first 10 days of any month since last October, topping normally stronger June levels by 6 per cent. However, deliveries for July 1-10 were off 5 per cent from the weak levels of a year ago and were the lowest for the period since 1971. Auto officials concede the industry still hasn't snapped out of its two-year slump, but they said the latest figures — running counter to the expected seasonal trend — are a further indication of gradual recovery in the new car market and the economy as a whole.

Egypt Wants UN Troops Out

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Egypt is demanding new Security Council pressure for an Israeli withdrawal as its price for allowing the United Nations Emergency Force in the Sinai Desert to continue acting as a buffer between Israeli and Egyptian troops. Egypt informed U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim on Tuesday that it would not agree to renewal of the force's mandate when it expires July 24. Egypt added, however, that "she is not against the proper use of the Force; Egypt objects to... its presence... as a means to maintain the state of 'no war — no peace' and the perpetuation of the occupation of Egyptian territory."

Poles 'Dig' Dancers From Van Buren

By DENNIS COGSWELL

Paw Paw Barren — Despite differences in customs and language, dance and music can be two very effective means of communication. That was how one group of young people, who were among 33 members and chaperones of the Van Buren Folk Dancers who returned late Monday from a three week tour of Poland, summarized their trip.

"We always had a lot of audience participation in our shows, and even though we didn't speak the same language everyone seemed to enjoy learning the songs," said Pat Kaukola, 16, a Paw Paw high school junior.

During one of the group's seven performances, one member literally lost his pants as he completed a leaping movement.

"The whole crowd just loved it," said Elaine Washburn of Paw Paw, the Folk Dancers' director.

Everyone came away with some very distinct impressions of Poland.

"I was impressed with how clean everything was and how many flowers there seemed to be," said Mark Field, 17, a Lawrence high school senior. "Everyone seemed to either be giving roses to someone or they had flowers in their front yard."

"You hear a lot about the black market but you don't ever really expect to see it," added Vicki Millard, a 17-year-old Paw Paw senior. "People were always coming up to us and trying to trade for American money."

Meals, the teens said, seldom varied. Hard rolls, salami, and cheese for breakfast; soup, pork, and potatoes for lunch; and then more rolls, cheese and salami for supper. Lunch is the main meal of the day and is served about 2 p.m. Supper was rarely eaten before 9 p.m.

"Whatever was in season at the time was what you got," Miss Washburn said.

During the tour, which was financed by local contributions and subsidized by the Polish government, the group visited a dozen cities, but stayed mainly in four — Warsaw, Poznan, Torun, and Szczecin.

"There seemed to be police and soldiers all over and we weren't allowed to take pictures of certain things," Vicki said.

Miss Washburn said that while the Folk Dancers were more or less free to shop on their own, there were probably some restraints on the Poles they were unaware of.

Mark said he came away with the impression that everyone in Poland was still deeply affected by the ravages of World War II.

"When you saw them (the people) walking down the street they seemed very solemn," Pat related. "But they would warm up when you began talking to them."

Miss Washburn said that one day her mother was attempting to take a picture of a street sweeper, but that he refused.

The man later pulled pictures from his wallet of himself when he was younger, explaining that they should represent how he should be remembered.

He then rolled up his sleeve, revealing a tattoo from a Nazi concentration camp.

The teens agreed that things Americans take for granted, like running tap water and ice cubes, were not always available. Much of the agricultural work, they said, is still done by horse.

"I couldn't get over the people painting the roads at one o'clock in the morning," Vicki said. "It seemed like the sun began rising at 2 a.m."

Other things were very much the same.

The way people dressed is not too much different than us," Pat said. "Their styles are very much like ours — a lot of them wear jeans."

There are no central supermarkets, but rather a lot of small individual shops, Miss Washburn said.

"They're privately run, but most of the profits go to the state," Mark said. "You couldn't be a prosperous businessman like you could here."

Generally, the group said their reception was warm, and often included 45-minute autograph sessions after performances.

"I thought I was pretty lucky to go, but I'm glad to be home," Mark concluded.

South Haven Lease Plan Delayed By Higher Costs

By TOM RENNER

SOUTH HAVEN — Higher than anticipated construction costs have delayed execution by the South Haven school district of a lease on the city's former recreation building, Supt. Harold Gaarde told the school board last night.

The district seeks the building for use as an administrative center. Earlier this year, the city agreed to lease the two-story building, located at Phoenix and Broadway, for $25 a year.

Initially the school system's architect had estimated the cost to remodel the building at $65,000. In the meantime, specifications developed for the project indicate the cost could be approximately $20,000 higher.

The recreation building is a structurally sound building located in a prominent location in our community. However, it is in a state of disrepair which will require extensive improvements regardless of who its occupants are," Gaarde said. "Certainly it would be unwise for the school district to expend a large sum to construct a new office building when examination may prove that at less cost it is possible to rejuvenate an existing public facility which will adequately serve the needs of school and community for many years to come."

Gaarde noted that the proposed project would be funded through an existing building reserve fund and not with special millage approved by voters last fall. The millage was authorized by voters to improve school buildings and grounds of the district.

"In making an attempt to secure a central office facility, the board of education has not lost sight of the fact that its primary concern is to make improvements in the educational facilities needed by our students," Gaarde added.

Gaarde said he has asked the architect to develop a plan to bring the expense within a range that would allow the project to be undertaken.

In other areas, the board approved an $80,920 budget for 1975-76 for the community recreation and education program. Same budget was approved by city council last month.

The board approved a new athletic disciplinary policy for students who violate training rules. The new policy calls for discipline in the nature of expulsion or suspension for offenses such as use of tobacco, possession of use of alcoholic beverages and drugs, commission of crimes and insubordination.

The board was asked to consider removing the position of director of guidance services from its policy handbook.

Each guidance unit of the school functions independently under the supervision of the respective principals. If all the duties in the board of education policies (for the director) were to be carried out, the directorship would require the majority of a counselor's time," reported Adrian Slikkers, high school principal.

Slikkers noted that the recommendation followed a study during the 1974-75 school year of the high school guidance department. The study also recommended several other changes in the counseling program.

The board was also asked to consider a policy that would prohibit a student from participating in more than one interscholastic sport per season.

"There have been occasions when students have wanted to participate in more than one sport per season. In order to allow more students to have the opportunity to participate, I believe adoption of the policy would be in the best interests of all students," noted Gaarde.

Board delayed until September a decision on establishing an interscholastic girls volleyball team. Delay was sought to allow administration to determine interest of students.

Gaarde reported the district's federal program for the teaching of reading has been renewed for 1975-76. Grant totaled $140,000 last year.

He also reported that a new work-study program has been funded by the state. The $5,200 grant will allow the district to give vocational work-study opportunities to high school students who would not participate in school's existing co-op program.

Rear-End I-94 Crash Injures One

PAW PAW — An Augusta man suffered possible head and back injuries when a semi truck plowed into the rear end of a state highway department paint truck he was driving yesterday afternoon on westbound I-94 three miles west of here.

Charles Leroy Blanchard, 38, was listed in fair condition this morning at Borgess hospital, Kalamazoo, according to hospital authorities.

Van Buren sheriff's deputies said the driver of the semi, identified as Jessie C. Sims, 32, 1960 Highland avenue, Benton Harbor, told them that when he saw the slow moving paint truck he did not have time to move into the passing lane or stop. Sims, who was not injured, was ticketed for failure to stop in an assured clear distance, deputies said.

The impact from the 4 p.m. crash drove the paint truck across the median and east-bound lanes, deputies said. Deputies estimated the paint truck was traveling at 10 miles per hour and the semi at 50 when the accident occurred.

Cubs' Madlock Shares MVP Award

NL Continues Domination

MILWAUKEE (AP) — National Leaguers may fight among themselves during the regular season but there's nothing like the sight of American League uniforms to get them together once each summer.

"These guys battle each other tooth and nail during the season," Manager Walter Alston said, "but at an All-Star game, it's great to see the enthusiasm and cheering. I'm proud of them all."

Alston's National League squad beat the American League 6-3 Tuesday night in the 46th midseason classic. It was the NL's 12th triumph in the last 13 meetings.

Alvin Dark, the AL manager from Oakland who saw his club rally from a 3-0 deficit and tie the score — only to give up three runs in the ninth inning — said: "Wait 'til next year."

Bill Madlock, the Chicago Cubs' third baseman, and Jon Matlack of the New York Mets who pitched the seventh and eighth innings, were named co-winners of the Commissioners Trophy, the most valuable player award.

Madlock, the National League's leading batter making his first All-Star appearance in a reserve role, singled past third baseman Graig Nettles for two runs, breaking the 3-3 tie.

Since both Madlock and Matlack have sound-alike names, each thought the other had won the MVP award.

Matlack, who gained the victory and allowed only one hit, striking out four, said: "Some guy grabbed both of us and told us we had both won. Fantastic! I was awestruck!"

Matlack was warming up in the bullpen when Boston's Carl Yastrzemski cracked the first pitch off right-hander Tom Seaver of the Mets for a three-run homer to tie the score in the sixth inning. "I had a sinking feeling when the ball dropped only 15 to 20 feet from me," the left-hander said. "I knew we were in trouble."

In addition to Dark, there were seven members of the world champion Oakland A's on the AL SQUAD. Most of them didn't help the cause.

In the crucial ninth, left fielder Claudell Washington dropped Reggie Smith's leadoff liner after a long run. Smith was credited with a single. Then Al Oliver of Pittsburgh doubled to the left field wall on a ball Washington seemingly could have caught but misjudged.

The New York Yankees' Catfish Hunter, the AL pitcher and eventual loser, then was replaced by Rich Gossage of the Chicago White Sox.

Gossage started out by hitting Philadelphia's Larry Riva with a pitch, setting up Madlock's game-winning blow.

Cincinnati's Pete Rose followed with a sacrifice fly to left, scoring Bowe with the wrapup run.

The National League had opened the scoring in the second inning off Oakland's Vida Blue with consecutive home runs by Dodgers Steve Garvey and Jimmy Wynn.

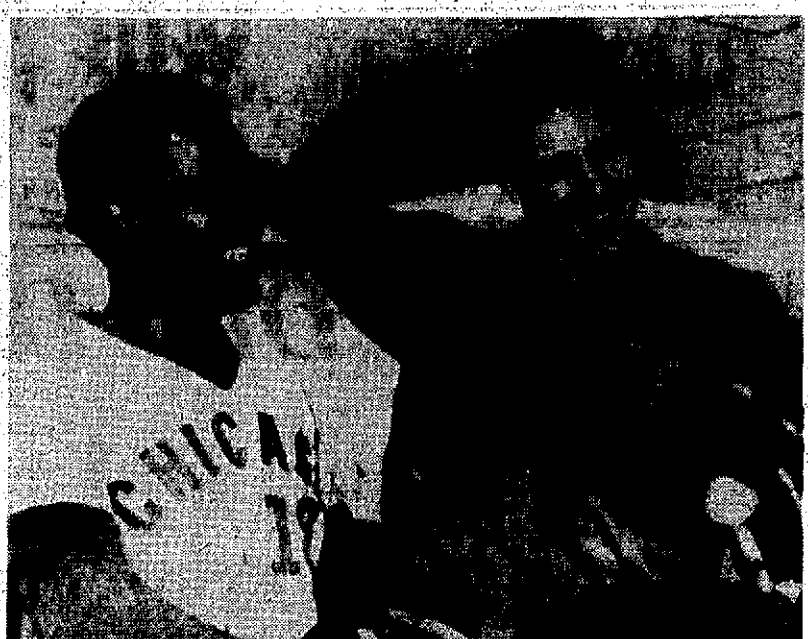

The NL made it 3-0 in the third against Kansas City's Steve Busby when Lou Brock of St. Louis and Cincinnati's Johnny Bench did the things they do best.

Brock, the all-time base-stealing king, singled and unsettled Busby into committing a balk. Then he stole third and Bench followed with an RBI single down the left field line.

NL Depth Reason For Success--Rose

Reserves Produce In Ninth

MILWAUKEE (AP) — It isn't that the American League doesn't have players as good as those in the National, according to Cincinnati firebrand Pete Rose. The National League just has more of them.

"It's our depth," said Rose, an almost perennial All-Star who joined the Reds in 1963, the year the National League began its All-Star Game domination. The NL made it 12 victories in the last 13 games by winning 6-3 Tuesday night.

"They have great players and great teams," Rose said of the American League, "but it seems the guys on our bench are better than the guys on theirs."

Reserve strength paid off for the Nationals in the ninth inning when Reggie Smith singled and Al Oliver doubled, setting up Bill Madlock's tiebreaking two-run single. All three were late-inning replacements.

Oliver said NL Manager Walter Alston of the Los Angeles Dodgers told him he wanted to save him for the late innings.

"I've been pretty successful getting some key hits against the Dodgers," Oliver said. "Maybe he wanted to save me for a clutch situation. I've always seemed to come up in a lot of key situations. I love to hit in the clutch."

Alston said he initially had planned to use Oliver earlier. "But he was my last left-handed hitter on the bench and I thought I might use him better in the ninth," he said. "That's one decision I'm glad I made."

Winning left-hander Jon Matlack of the New York Mets, the fourth pitcher used by Alston, provided further reserve strength by striking out four batters in hurling scoreless seventh and eighth innings.

"I really think the National League has more talent," said Matlack. "This is the cream of the crop from both leagues and it should be an even match, but it hasn't been. We have a lot of pride and we want it to continue."

Madlock, once an American Leaguer with the Texas Rangers, said the NL players displayed more confidence in the dugout. "I couldn't believe the guys on the bench," he said. "It was fun. What they were saying was unbelievable, getting on their guys and everything. Ballplayers in the National League are more aggressive. The American league bench looked like they were just sitting there, waiting to lose."

"We have more stars," Madlock added. "Maybe not as many more since they got the designated-hitter rule, but we have more stars as far as all-around ballplayers. American League Manager Alvin Dark of Oakland seemed tired of trying to explain continued AL futility.

"They have great ballplayers over there — but we do too," he said. "They just beat us. It's like the Brooklyn Dodgers used to say: 'We'll beat 'em next year.'"

Oakland slugger Reggie Jackson, a prime reason his team is coming off three successive world championships, wasn't particularly concerned. "Overall, the National League has better players," he said matter-of-factly. "But I have three World Series rings."

Namath Gets $5 Million

Selling Faberge Perfumes, Cosmetics

JOE NAMATH

NEW YORK (AP) — "I would like to play with the Jets two more years." On that optimistic note, Broadway Joe Namath began final football negotiations with the New York Jets today, neither he nor his attorney taking a hard line.

"We never have had any serious problems," Namath said of his dealings with the team that signed him to a $400,000 bonus when he came out of the University of Alabama 10 years ago.

Namath, fresh from signing a $5 million contract to sell perfumes and cosmetics, was to join his attorney, Jimmy Walsh, in a bargaining session with Jets' President Phil Iselin and the team's lawyer, Dick Barovick, over lunch. The side was not disclosed.

The Jets have offered Joe $1 million for three years, but Namath said Tuesday that he only wanted to play two more years. It is expected that he will agree to $400,000-a-year deal for the two years.

Walsh himself has turned from his previous hard line, jocularly saying at Namath's press conference Tuesday: "I don't think Richard Barovick would put up $5 million if he thought Joe was going to cut out of football."

Barrie is president and chief operating officer of Faberge, Inc., which put Namath on its payroll at that fabulous figure to help the company sell perfumes and toiletries and to join in the company's various sports promotions.

Under the contract, said to be the biggest ever given a celebrity for a promotional activity, Namath will receive $200,000 a year for 20 years. He will have renewal options after the eighth and 14th years.

Also, he stands to collect some more money from products to be put on the market in his name.

Bench Comes Up With Key Star Play

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Cincinnati catcher Johnny Bench is one of those all stars who, it seems, does his thing on an annual basis at baseball's mid-summer classic.

"You get a little generated when you're able to make a big play at a time it gets you out of a tough situation," said Bench, who subtly helped the National League to a 6-3 victory over the frustrated American League Tuesday night. "It's kind of like hitting the ball out of the park."

Bench, who also knocked in his sixth All-Star run with a third-inning single off Kansas City's Steve Busby, is now 8-for-22 in eight All-Star games for a .364 average.

Bench gained a perfect throw to Los Angeles first baseman Steve Garvey to pick off Oakland's Bert Campaneris and end the fourth inning.

"He just jumped off," continued Bench. "I'd been trying to check in the dugout to see if they wanted me to throw down, but when Bobby Bonds lunged out at the pitch it really gave me a good opportunity to throw."

The American League had two runners on base with two out in the fourth, trying to cut into a 3-0 deficit with Bonds of the New York Yankees batting at the moment Bench nailed Campaneris.

"It just happened," said Campaneris. "Bench is the only one that could have got me."

The veteran shortstop was only one of several A's who left slightly the worse for wear, along with some of the game's other top stars.

New York Mets ace Tom Seaver was tagged for a three-run homer, a 400-foot clout, by Boston's Carl Yastrzemski that tied the score 3-3 in the sixth.

"I really don't feel embarrassed at all about giving up the home run," said Seaver. "I threw him a fastball that really didn't have too much on it and he really drilled it."

Even baseball's wealthiest employee, pitcher Catfish Hunter of the New York Yankees, suffered from the American League's deflated showing against the Nationals.

Although he had already gone to the showers, Hunter was the victim of the three-run uprising in the ninth inning which gave the NL its 12th victory in the last 13 All-Star games.

Hunter gave up a single to Reggie Smith and a double to Al Oliver, then Rich Gossage came on, hit Larry Bowe with a pitch to load the bases, gave up Bill Madlock's two-run tie-breaking single and Pete Rose's sacrifice fly.

New Buffalo Selects Veteran Grid Coach

NEW BUFFALO — A veteran of 36 years in coaching with an impressive 270 victories is the latest to try to turn around New Buffalo's football fortunes.

Three different coaches have produced just one Bison victory over the past three seasons, but Maximilian Burnell has told the school board that he is confident he can develop a winner at New Buffalo.

Burnell, who owns an overall 279-70 record, was at Moline six seasons. Previous to that he was at Bishop Lynch high school in Dallas, Tex., for three campaigns, including a 7-2-0 mark his last year.

And before that, Burnell compiled a 105-18-6 mark at St. George high school in Evanston, Ill., including two Chicago city championships and one mythical championships.

He started coaching at South Bend St. Joseph and has coached four players who went on to become college all-Americans. He currently has 24 of his former gridgers playing college ball.

Burnell played five sports in high school in Duluth, Minn., and graduated from Notre Dame in 1939.

Burnell, who is single, will teach physical education and history at New Buffalo. Eau Claire coach Paul Bergan is a former Burnell football assistant, and former New Buffalo principal Stan Sosnowski is the current principal at United Township high school in Moline.

Burnell said all of his previous coaching assignments initially offered challenges similar to New Buffalo's. He also cautioned against expecting overnight success.

Bruin Coach Tells Court About Pressuring Players

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — Boston Bruins' hockey coach Don Cherry has testified that he, in effect, pushed his players to the edge of violence during a disastrous National Hockey League road trip last winter.

That road trip brought the Bruins to Bloomington, Minn., last Jan. 4 for a game against the Minnesota North Stars. Several scraps developed in the first period, between Dave Forbes of the Bruins and Henry Boucha of the North Stars, and Boucha suffered an eye injury. Forbes, 26, is on trial in Hennepin District Court on a charge of aggravated assault with a dangerous weapon — his hockey stick. Conviction carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine. The case may go to the jury late today.

Cherry was the first witness called by the defense after prosecutor Gary Flakne rested his case. He said the road trip for Boston was its worst in five years.

"The pressure was really on. We really had to win — it was an explosive game," Cherry told the jury of seven men and five women.

He said he felt his job was in jeopardy because of the losing road trip. "The pressure was on me and if the pressure is on me, it's on the players."

The coach said he told his players in the dressing room before the game, "If you don't get going, you're all going to be gone" to the minor leagues. Pregame events were pretty much routine, he said, except "there was a little added heat from me."

Cherry said his players were not aggressive enough last season and expressed the view that "hard body checking wins hockey games."

ND Elevates Three To New Sports Spots

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — New head wrestling and track coaches and a women's sports coordinator have been appointed at the University of Notre Dame, it was announced Tuesday.

Joe Piane moved up from assistant to head coach in track, succeeding Don Faley, who is taking another position in the school's athletic department.

Ray Zapata, an assistant wrestling coach, takes over the head coaching duties, replacing Fred Perchuk, who is moving to California.

Astrid Hotzolt, 28, an instructor in the physical education department at Notre Dame, will be charged with organizing a sports program for the enrollment of about 1,000 women. The over-all enrollment at Notre Dame is about 8,500.

Cherry said his players were not aggressive enough last season and expressed the view that "hard body checking wins hockey games."

"It always has been my philosophy to win at all costs," Cherry said.

The Boston coach heatedly resisted a suggestion by Flakne that his "win at all costs" philosophy motivated his players to injure competing players.

"I'm telling you I didn't mean that," Cherry said.

"The coach said Forbes was 'a very distraught young man' and had tears in his eyes when he came to the Boston bench following the scrap with Boucha."

"He said, 'What have I done? What have I done?'" Cherry told the court. "I put my arms around him and I said, 'Let's take it easy and go to the dressing room.'"

Bob Knight Out To Extend String

Berrien Invitational This Weekend

Can Bob Knight's monopoly of the Berrien Hills Invitational golf tournament be broken up? That question will be answered this weekend during the ninth running of the best ball event.

The veteran Knight, one of the chairmen of the Invitational, has captured five championships in the tourney's eight-year history.

He has won the tourney the last three years and also in 1967 and 1970. Knight combined with Ralph Mack to take the title in 1970, 1972 and 1973 and with Tom Schick to win the crown last summer.

Knight again will be playing with a new partner this year. Knight will team with Gene Fetter, a member at the Point O' Woods.

Knight and Fetter should get plenty of competition from former Bridgman star golfer Bob Ackerman and ex-St. Joseph standout Jim Erickson. Ackerman, a recent Indiana University graduate, was recently named to the Golf Coaches of American All-American second team.

Ironically, Ackerman's father, Bob Sr., and Knight paired to win the first Invitational championship in 1967.

Athletics Lose Biggest Fish, Still Leading West Contest

OAKLAND (AP) — This was going to be the year it ended. Billy Martin's upstart Texas Rangers were stronger. Kansas City would mount a serious challenge throughout the season. And either would be capable of doing in an Oakland club which had lost its biggest fish.

But the beat goes on in the American League West, where the Oakland A's, minus Catfish Hunter, are doing very well, thank you.

So well they can wrap up a fifth straight division title with less than break-even baseball the rest of the season, provided owner Charles O. Finley has it figured right.

Finley says 90 victories can "keep it alive in '76" for his three-time world champions. That's how many the A's won last year after coming up to the All-Star break with a 53-41 record and a nine-game lead.

At this year's recess, the A's are 53-32 with an 8½-game lead over Kansas City.

One important reason Oakland is so far on top is that they have avoided serious injuries. The only regulars to miss more than four games have been Bert Campaneris (eight) and Bill North (seven).

Kansas City, meanwhile, had to go three weeks without dangerous Amos Otis and had pitchers Nelson Briles and Lindy McDaniel on the shelf for a month each.

A's Manager Alvin Dark isn't convinced 90 victories will send his team toward another World Series. "Kansas City is too good for that," he says, but the Royals must improve on a 47-41 record.

Dark says the Royals are well balanced, noting that their hitting and speed match his club's. Royals Manager Jack McKenn says, "It all comes down to consistency in pitching. If we get it, we have a good shot at the pennant."

The four current non-contenders all look for a better second half. Here's a rundown:

—CHICAGO: A nine-game winning streak moved the White Sox from last to third, but they still trail by 14 games. Back trouble kept Bart Johnson disabled and a bad elbow sidelined reliever Terry Forster.

Free-Swinging Kids Give Red Sox Edge

BOSTON (AP) — Everyone insists the battle in the American League East is a five-team horse race, but the youthful, free-swinging Boston Red Sox are threatening to make it a runaway.

The Baltimore Orioles went into the trade market and the New York Yankees dug into the cash box last winter, becoming virtual co-favorites for the division title.

The Milwaukee Brewers acquired home run king Hank Aaron and the Cleveland Indians named veteran slugger Frank Robinson as the major leagues' first black manager.

Meanwhile, the Red Sox made what appeared to be a minor deal, sending high-salaried and aging Tommy Harper to California for veteran utility infielder Bob Heise. Boston elected to go with kids.

The kids, namely rookies Fred Lynn and Jim Rice, are the big reason Boston reached the All-Star Game break with a 50-37 record and a 4½ game lead over Milwaukee and New York. Baltimore is eight games back, Cleveland 9½ and cellar-dwelling Detroit 10½.

"We've opened a little daylight, but there's still a long way to go," Boston Manager Darrell Johnson says. "It's nice to be in front the way we are. However, I still think this is a five-team race and things won't really start to thin out until mid-August."

Rival managers in Milwaukee, New York, Baltimore and Cleveland agree with Johnson. And all five are keeping fingers crossed when they talk about pitching.

Detroit is excluded for the most part in the race. Manager Ralph Houk is rebuilding and the Tigers don't figure despite a recent winning streak.

"All we have to do is start hitting," Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver has repeatedly said, but his team still fails to hit.

The Orioles closed to within 4½ games of the division lead while the Red Sox endured a recent 2-5 road trip. Then Boston returned home and won seven consecutive games to pull away.

Lynn and Rice have been Boston's pleasant surprises. Lynn, who has just over two years in pro ball after starting at Southern California, is hitting .342 while leading the league with 71 runs batted in. His 87 hits include 18 homers, 4 triples and 25 doubles.

Rice, the International League's MVP at Pawtucket last year, won a battle with resurging Tony Conigliaro to be the designated hitter. He now is a fixture in left field, with Conigliaro trying to prove himself at Pawtucket. Rice is batting .288 with 14 homers and 61 RBI.

With Lynn and Rice hitting behind him, Carl Yastrzemski, who will be 36 next month, has had a resurgence. No longer can opposing hurlers pitch around him. He had five consecutive hits Sunday, raising his average to .313.

The Red Sox lead the American League in hitting with a lusty .275 average. The pitching earned run average is a fat four-plus but no one seems worried, mostly because of Fenway Park's short fences.

Boston's biggest test is just ahead. The Sox play two games at home this week, then hit the road. They will play 38 games in 35 days. The worst stretch starts Aug. 6 in Milwaukee, 13 consecutive road games.

Plangger's Splits Doubleheader

Plangger's and Grand Rapids Naps swapped one-run decisions Tuesday night in Michigan softball league action at Plangger's Park.

Neal's came up with two runs in the seventh to take a 2-1 win in the opener and then Plangger's retaliated with a 4-3 victory in the nightcap.

Neal's swatted four of its five hits in the seventh to pull out the win. George Luther took the loss although the winning hit came off reliever Rick Plangger.

Ken Bosch limited Plangger's to one hit, a bunt single by Ron Mandarino. In the fifth, Mandarino scored in the first on a walk, two hit-batters and a wild pitch.

Plangger's scored the winning run in the sixth of the nightcap on Nick Shushman's single, an error and Dan Foster's RBI single. Foster had two singles and Rick Plangger a RBI double. Hitter posted the win with a five-hitter.

Connors' Leg Ailing

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Connors' right leg is in a cast and his manager, Bill Riordan, describes as "questionable" the possibility of the 22-year-old tennis star defending his U.S. Open title at Forest Hills later next month, the New York Times reported in its Wednesday edition.

Riordan had earlier reported that Connors tore a tendon in the leg during his first match at Wimbledon.

Riordan reportedly told the Times Tuesday that Connors, presently in Los Angeles, is eager to start playing again, but in the meantime plans a visit to Las Vegas, Nev., for singing lessons with Paul Anka.

The lessons were said to be in preparation for a duet the two will perform on Howard Cosell's television variety show this fall.

At Major League Meetings San Francisco Key Issue

MILWAUKEE (AP) — With All-Star Game festivities concluded, major league officials turned their attention today to key issues facing the sport, one of which is what to do about the San Francisco Bay Area situation.

When Walter O'Malley took his Dodgers from Brooklyn to Los Angeles after the 1957 season, he took along Horace Stoneham, and got Rich Stoneham, who took his New York Giants to San Francisco, got poorer.

Stoneham is up to his eyeballs in red ink, dwindling attendance and a wind tunnel called Candlestick Park. On the other side of the Bay is Charles O. Finley and the Oakland A's, who have won three straight world championships without attracting many paying customers. Finley has said that without postseason money, he, too, would be in the red.

Baseball's recently formed

Franchise Committee met last week on the problem and were to give a report on their findings at today's summer meeting of club owners. It seemed likely that one of the clubs would be moved, most likely to Seattle.

Other cities interested in a club are Toronto, Washington and New Orleans. Their best chance to land a franchise appeared to be in a switch of cities because expansion is not imminent.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said owners would seek a resolution of the San Francisco problem at today's meetings, but Finley responded that nothing would be settled that quickly.

Another key matter on the agenda is consideration of extending Kuhn's contract. His seven-year term expires Aug. 12, 1978.

Kuhn needs approval of nine of the 12 club owners in each league to stay on the job, which pays $150,000. Despite opposition from Finley, he was expected to get the extension but not the pay boost he wants.

Green Bay Opens Drills, New Coach Starr Satisfied

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — The Green Bay Packers had what Coach Bart Starr called a good learning day Tuesday as they opened two-day drills for rookies and a few early-arriving veterans.

"There's not enough time to do the teaching you would like. For a first day I thought it wasn't too bad," he said. "We're not excited about it but overall it wasn't too bad."

But the new coach and general manager of the National Football League club said the 23 players who participated in the drills of nearly two hours each probably learned the importance of conditioning.

"We have some people who are in excellent condition," he said. "We have some others who apparently didn't realize you can't play this game unless you are in top condition."

Results of the physical examinations conducted Monday showed South Carolina fullback Jay Lynn Hodgkin, the team's ninth round draft choice who injured his knee during the Packer spring camp in Arizona, still had problems following surgery on it.

"He won't participate in our drills per se, but he has been put on a rehabilitation program here," Starr said.

Punter Rod Widby, who missed last season with back problems, was undergoing his physical Tuesday.

Starr walked from group to group during the drills, attempting to learn just as his players were.

"I have never been an offensive guard, so I wanted to listen to exactly what Coach (Leon) McLaughlin has to say to the offensive linemen, for example," he said.

The remainder of the veterans are to report to camp by Saturday.

Bob Harlan, the club's assistant general manager, said he expected to hear today from Ted Hendricks' business agent, Tony Roberts. Roberts and the linebacker who played out his option last season while starring for the Packers talked Monday with the Atlanta Falcons.

With collective bargaining sessions between the owners and players association set for later this month, the owner's Player Relations Committee was to report on the new basic agreement. The current contract, which encompasses all major leagues, expires Dec. 31, while the benefit plan agreement ends March 31, 1978.

Mervyn Miller, executive director of the Players Association, met with player representatives here Monday and said his group's new proposals included revision in the free agent draft and reserve clause and a substantial increase in the player's pension fund. He would not reveal the proposals.

Former Music Teacher Andrews Target Of $275,000 Suit

A former Andrews university music teacher is suing the school and two of its top officials for $275,000, claiming he was fired without cause and without opportunity for a hearing.

The plaintiff, Rudolf S. Strukoff, of 740 North Main street, Berrien Springs, claims he was denied continuous employment by the school even though he had acquired the equivalent of tenure, and that he was improperly fired because continuous employment was denied last Jan. 22.

The suit does not seek reinstatement. School officials said Strukoff is currently employed as a music teacher at Andrews' summer school, but his counsel, Benton Harbor Atty. F.A. Jones, said Strukoff does not have a contract for the fall semester.

Named defendants in the suit were Andrews university,

President Richard Hammill, and Paul Hamel, chairman of the music department at Andrews.

Strukoff claims he was hired as a member of the faculty in the music department in 1969, and at that time received a document stating he was entitled to continuous appointment as a fulltime faculty member after continuous appointments for the first five years.

The suit contends Strukoff received continuous yearly appointments from 1970 to 1975, and that Andrews' personnel policies regarding faculty members state if the employee's services prove satisfactory, he is no longer appointed for a specific term but can continue employment unless services are terminated for cause and with the opportunity for a hearing.

Strukoff claims President Hammill notified him his services were terminated on Jan. 22, and contends there was no reference to any charges of misconduct and no hearing on the dismissal was held. He claims a person cannot continue on the faculty without continuous appointment, and the denial was tantamount to being fired.

Bill Asks Prison Sentence

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — People facing Halloween treats with poison or drugs could be sent to prison under a bill introduced in the state House. Sponsor Rep. Casmer P. Ogonowski, D-Detroit, said Tuesday that anyone who placed a drug in Halloween treats and gave them away could be guilty of a felony. Those convicted could face up to 10 years in jail, a fine as high as $10,000, or both. The measure would expand a law now banning insertion of harmful objects such as glass or razor blades into Halloween treats, he said.

Congress Votes

BY CONGRESSIONAL QUARTERLY

WASHINGTON — Here are votes of area members of Congress on key roll calls for the week ending July 10:

HOUSE

Supersonic Transports. By a 196-214 vote, the House rejected an amendment that would have prohibited the use of air traffic control funds to assist supersonic transports taking off or landing at U.S. airports. The amendment was designed to prohibit SST's from using U.S. airports.

Supporters of the amendment argued that the SST generates ear-splitting noise and may possibly contribute to the destruction of the earth's ozone layer. Congress, they said, already canceled federal subsidies for development of an American SST because of the noise and the American people should not have to be annoyed by noise from foreign built SST's.

Opponents said Congress should not ban the SST's, but should permit the Federal Aviation Administration to complete its investigation into whether they can land and take off without causing problems for persons living near airports.

Voting to prohibit funds for SST operation: Blanchard (D), Conyers (D), O'Neill (Majority Leader).

Voting not to prohibit funds for SST operation: Brown (R), Hutchinson (R), Vander Jagt (R), Rhodes (Minority Leader).

Naval Oil Reserves. The House voted 102-305 to reject an Armed Service Committee proposal to maintain military control over naval petroleum reserves and to restrict production from those reserves to no more than 300,000 barrels of oil per day for three years.

The House later passed a bill authorizing creation of national petroleum reserves in which these naval reserves could be included — under Interior Department supervision.

Advocates of maintaining military control over the reserves argued that the naval reserves were set aside for wartime use by the military and should be protected for that purpose, rather than being produced for use by the nation as a whole. They pointed out that the last time the Interior Department had control over these reserves, it resulted in the Teapot Dome scandal of the 1920's involving bribery of Interior Department officials by oil companies.

Opponents argued that oil produced from the naval reserves could reduce the national dependence on imports and provide a ready reserve for the nation, including the military, in time of emergency.

They added that safeguards had been provided against another Teapot Dome affair.

Voting to end military control over oil reserves: Blanchard (D), Brown (R), Conyers (D), Hutchinson (R), Vander Jagt (R).

Voting to continue military control over oil reserves: O'Neill (Majority Leader).

Not voting: Rhodes (Minority Leader).

White House Staff. By a 157-234 vote, the House rejected a move to freeze the size of President Ford's top-level White House staff at the present 54 positions. The House subsequently approved by voice vote a bill authorizing as many as 95 positions, although the administration said it did not intend to seek funds to fulfill them all right away.

Supporters of the freeze argued that large increases in the number of key White House staff jobs over the last four decades had led to an "imperial presidency" and had resulted in some of the abuses uncovered in the Watergate scandal. Instead of having so many powerful assistants who are not accountable to Congress, they said, the President should rely more on the Cabinet for advice.

Opponents maintained that modern presidents need large staffs in order to accommodate the heavy workload thrust upon them by Congress, and that the President needs the flexibility to hire more assistants whenever the workload increases further. They said President Ford, by maintaining an "open" White House, has earned congressional trust that he will not abuse the staff system.

Voting to freeze White House staff positions: Blanchard (D), Conyers (D).

Voting not to freeze White House staff positions: Brown (R), Hutchinson (R), Vander Jagt (R), O'Neill (Majority Leader), Rhodes (Minority Leader).

SENATE

Reduced-Price School Lunches. By a 29-61 vote, the Senate rejected an amendment to raise the income eligibility level for reduced-price school lunches by 25 per cent and to mandate that schools with lunch programs offer reduced-price lunches.

Supporters of the change, which would allow reduced-price lunches for children from families with incomes up to $10,000, argued that it would aid those families currently having the hardest time making ends meet — tax-paying, middle-income families that are not on public assistance.

Opponents countered that the amendment was a misinterpretation of the purpose of the school lunch program as an aid to needy children from families with little or no income who are genuinely unable to buy enough food to meet their needs. They also argued that to spend the additional $20-million required by the amendment would be fiscally irresponsible.

Voting to increase the income eligibility level: Griffin (R).

Voting not to increase the income eligibility level: Hart (D).

Foreign Newspapers Give Views Of Portugal Fate

LONDON (AP) — Portugal is facing its "hour of destiny" after last week's decision by the country's largest party, the Socialists, to quit the coalition government, says the Swedish newspaper Expressen.

At stake in the "giant battle" for Portugal's future are "the existence of the party system, respect for election results, democratic rights," the newspaper wrote in an editorial.

Another Stockholm newspaper, Aftonbladet, said that the "popular legitimacy" of the leftist policies pursued by the military rulers "will be gravely weakened with the Socialists in opposition."

A British Sunday newspaper, The Observer, commented that while the army was abandoning its promise to set up a parliamentary democracy, it is too premature to give up all hope of Portugal gaining political freedom.

"The surrender of its original promises is not favored by a majority of the military junta" which is "too divided to be able to decide on any political policy," The Observer said.

The Guardian, a liberal British daily, reviewed the situation in Argentina, where the cabinet resigned and President Isabel Peron backed down in a confrontation with the labor movement, the traditional bedrock of Peronist support.

"The essence of the crisis is that the Peronism of the postwar years is now ill-suited to the changed circumstances of today," said The Guardian.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's emergency rule and suspension of civil liberties in India on the grounds that opposition politicians were conspiring to overthrow her continued to attract comment.

The Singapore Straits Times, said the impression is growing that Mrs. Gandhi is determined to hang on to her new powers to push through her programs to deal with poverty, economic stagnation and social backwardness.

The London Daily Mail's Dermot Purgavie, ending five years as the paper's New York correspondent, wrote that during this time the trauma of Watergate, Vietnam, the energy crisis and a chronic recession seem to have fundamentally altered America's values.

"The old certainties and traditional attitudes are passing, institutions are being sternly reassessed," he said.

"It may be some time before this country regains its composure and assurance. But Americans are persistently idealistic, resilient, ingenious and adaptable. They and the republic will survive."

U.S. Has Low Inflation

NEW YORK (AP) — Would you believe that relative to most other nations, the United States has one of the lowest rates of consumer price inflation?

But the latest figures from the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development show that of 24 trading nations, the United States had the fourth lowest inflation rate for the 12 months through May.

The OECD lists the United States inflation rate at 9.5 per cent, leaving only Germany, at 6.1 per cent, Switzerland, at 8.2, and Austria, at 8.6, in better shape.

SHIRLEY: Another book on the way.

Seven Kids, Nine Cars

It's Easy To Be Broke

Q: I read Isaac Hayes has money problems. How can this happen to a big star like Hayes? — W.T., Detroit, Mich.

A: Easy. Hayes left his record company and settled out of court on a $5.3 million breach of contract suit with Stax Records in which he lost a bundle. He's got five kids by a former marriage and two by his current wife. Expenses like nine cars, a $480,000 Memphis home and a staff of 75 people on the payroll all add up.

Q: Barbara Streisand's current lover John Peters used to be married to Leslie Anne Warren. When did they get divorced? — R.G., Berkeley, Calif.

A: They are only separated and some close observers feel

John and Leslie, who have a 4-year-old son Christopher, have not gotten divorced because they're really still in love.

Q: I just loved both of Shirley MacLaine's books and think she's as good a writer as she is an actress. Does she have plans for another book? — E.P., Memphis, Tenn.

A: She's writing one right now and this one is a novel, unlike her other two, which were non-fiction and autobiographical.

Q: Where's the best place for a guy to get lucky with meeting gals? — M.C.P., Paterson, N.J.

A: The best place for same.

PEOPLE

By Robin Adams Sloan

according to the latest figures — and confirmed girl watchers — is the Chelsea district of London, where there are six females for every five males.

Where Is So-And-So Today? This is one of The Gossip Column's most frequently asked questions. So we thought we'd tell you that if you are asking about stars like Don Ameche, Dana Andrews, June Allyson, Pat O'Brien, Cesar Romero, HAYES: Those expenses add up.

Tab Hunter, Gig Young, Mickey Rooney, Donald O'Connor, Dan Dailey, Eleanor Parker, Sid Caesar or Dorothy Lamour — they are doing just fine playing dinner theaters all over the U.S. Dan, for instance, makes $5,000 a week and can work 50 weeks a year if he chooses. These stars gross more from playing cross country than a star can make on Broadway in a hit.

Q: I'm interested in the plight of the Vietnamese refugees. How is the U.S. program working out? — W.P., Pine Hill, N.Y.

A: The refugee program may turn into a political bombshell.

So far the most optimistic figure is that only about 30,000 out of 150,000 refugees have been resettled. The rest are still in camps. Worse, most of them are homesick and some experts say that it is even likely that a majority of the refugees will decide that Communist Vietnam is better than Southern California.

Posters, Decals To Give Warbler Folk Hero Status

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Posters of Michigan's formidable Kirtland's Warbler will be available like a folk hero or rock star from the state Department of Natural Resources.

The department is selling posters and decals of the bird for $1 each and a sew-on patch for $2 to help finance a preservation and research program for non-game wildlife. The half-ounce blue and yellow warbler is the only creature designated an endangered species which is native to Michigan. Dr. Howard Tanner, DNR director, said Tuesday.

The warbler items are being distributed starting this week at DNR district and regional offices, said Tanner. Eventually the materials will be available at stores and offices of such organizations as the Michigan United Conservation Clubs, said a DNR spokesman.

The Kirtland's Warbler is the rallying point, but there will be publicity on all kinds of non-game wildlife, said Tanner.

The initial run of posters, decals and patches could bring the DNR $25,000, the spokesman said.

Only a handful of the Kirtland's Warblers are left. The birds nest only in Michigan but spend their winters in the Bahamas.

According to the latest census, the world's population of Kirtland's Warblers now totals 338, an increase of 24 over last year.

American Nazi Members Hurt

DETROIT (AP) — Two American Nazi party members were slightly injured and 10 others were taken into protective custody Tuesday when a downtown crowd lauded and struck them, police said.

The party members, dressed in brown shirts and red and black swastika arm bands, were trying to sell "White Power," their party newspaper.

THIRD ARTICLE IN A SERIES

'Categoricals' Aid State Schools

EDITOR'S NOTE: Here's the third in a series of four articles, offered via State Sen. Charles O. Zollar, R-Benton Harbor, to help readers better understand school financing on the state and local level.

The general formula for school finance in Michigan is "$39,000 SEV per pupil up to 25 mills."

School districts with SEV per pupil below $39,000 are called "in formula" districts and receive state assistance; school districts above $39,000 SEV per pupil are "out of formula" and receive no state assistance under this general formula.

In addition to the general formula, the state provides funding by category to assist districts with special needs. While all categorical state aid eventually benefits pupils, for the purpose of this discussion it might be helpful to divide the eleven major categories into two groups.

The first group, district categorical, is designed to assist in funding special school district needs and the second group, pupil categorical, is aimed at special pupil needs.

Let us now consider the major district categorical, the reason for each, and its formula for receiving state funds.

Intermediate School District: Often smaller school districts don't have enough students in need of special programs (special education and vocational education) to run such programs at the school district level. Therefore, 58 intermediate school districts have been created to help the local districts within their boundaries to centralize and economize educational services.

The basic formula for funding intermediate school districts equals .88 times the total number of pupils served, reduced by a sum equal to .2 of a mill on the SEV of the property within the intermediate school district boundaries.

Media Centers: The idea

Local Government Pays Most

The money to run Michigan's elementary and secondary school system comes 51 per cent from local units of government, 6 per cent from the state, and 3 per cent from the federal government.

behind Michigan's 22 media centers, which include all of the state's local school districts, is the centralized purchasing, use and repair of costly media equipment (projectors, films, graphics, etc.). Basically, the state pays 25¢ per person served by the media center.

Transportation: Rural school districts usually have greater transportation costs than city school districts. The state pays back every school district 75 per cent of its last year's transportation cost (school buses and bus driver salaries) for pupils who live further than 1½ miles from school.

Municipal Overburden: Certain school districts have difficulty getting voter support to increase operating millage because of high non-school property taxes (county, city, and other special millages). Municipal overburden gives relief to school districts which have a total millage rate, excluding school district operating millage, greater than 125% of the state average.

The SEV for those school districts is reduced by the amount their non-school tax burden exceeds 125% of the state average. This reduction of SEV provides these districts with more state money by virtue of the $39,000 SEV per pupil guarantee on operating millage.

Capital Outlay: The main expenses for a local school district can be broken down into operating costs (salaries, wages, textbooks, heat, light, etc.) and construction costs. Operating costs are funded by operating millage (8 or 9 mills non-voted from the county and an average of 17 mills voted by the people in the school district).

Construction costs are funded primarily by a separate millage called debt retirement which is also levied by vote of the people in the school district. Certain school districts which have a high debt millage are unable to get voter support to increase operating millage and as a result cannot take full advantage of the "equal yield" formula which only applies to operating millage.

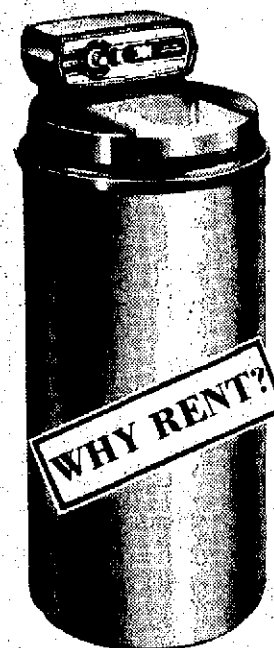

Because of this the state allows those districts with less than 22 operating mills to apply the equal yield concept to their debt millage in order that the burden of the debt millage might be reduced and these districts might then be able to increase their operating millage up to the 25 mill level.

We have now seen how the state attempts to provide funding support for the various specialized needs of local school districts. Next, Pupil Categoricals will be discussed.

Democrats May Pick New York

MIAMI (AP) — Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss says the party is leaning toward New York City as the site of next year's convention, the Miami Herald said today.

In a Washington-dated story, Strauss was quoted as saying that published reports that New York had been selected are not "inaccurate enough to be called wrong."

A party committee is scheduled to meet Sept. 8 to select a city for the convention, and the other two primary contenders are New Orleans and Los Angeles, the newspaper said.

NO PEACE: Oliver Green moved from Oakland to Keyes, Calif., where he expected to find peace and quiet. The fact he and his family would be the only blacks living in Keyes seemed of little concern to Green. But two mysterious fires and a dud firebomb thrown through a window have plagued his life. Now he keeps two loaded guns by his bed. (AP Wirephoto)

NEW BUFFALO — A special meeting of the New Buffalo township board, postponed Monday night because resolutions scheduled for consideration were not ready in time, has been rescheduled for Thursday night. Resolutions for the proposed rezoning sought by Independent Steel for an addition and by the Tin Tree theater for a permanent structure to replace a tent now in use will be considered at the 8 p.m. session. Also to be considered are bids for trash pick up in the township.

Fire Guts Gay '90s Building

DOWAGIAC — Fire this morning gutted the interior of a unique three-car garage at the home of Mrs. Mary Lou Comstock, 404 Spruce street, here.

The building was formerly an old coach house, built around the turn of the century, to house horse drawn coaches. An auto parked in the building was destroyed, according to Dowagiac city firemen.

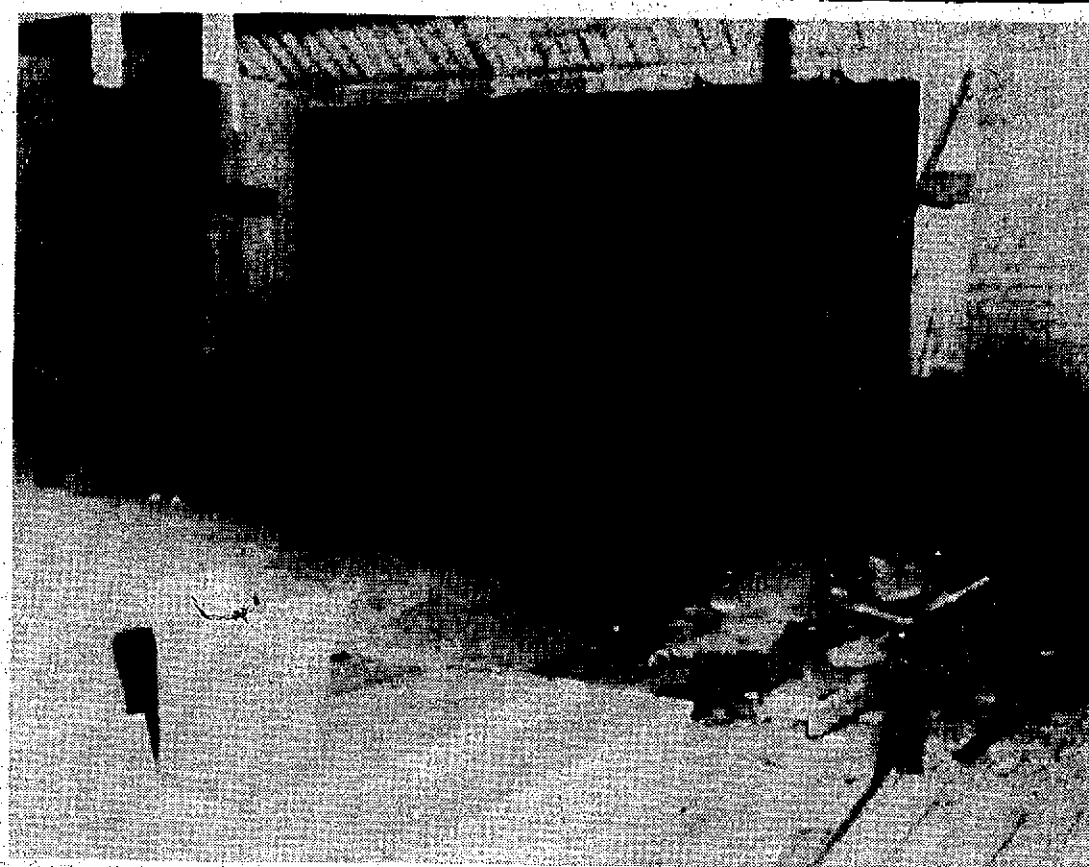

Lawton Chooses Street Contractor

LAWTON — Lawton village council last night accepted the low bid of Klett Construction company, Hartford, for proposed street improvement projects in the village this summer.

Klett Construction's low bid was $10,905, compared to a bid of $11,258 submitted by John G. Yerington company, Benton Harbor.

The work calls for the resurfacing of Orchard street from M-40 to Nursery street. The council's street committee will also negotiate with the company additional resurfacing on Nursery street from White Oak street north 600 feet to the village limits. The latter work was not included in the bid specifications. Richard Kraft, village engineer, said the whole project should run about $12,500.

In other areas, the council approved a motion to eliminate the village's spray water service to farmers after Oct. 1. For $18.25 a year, farmers have been able to obtain a permit for unlimited use of water from a village water tank for spraying purposes. The council said the village was losing money on the

ONE IN ARREARS $5,880 Two ADC Dads Jailed

Two ADC dads behind in their child support payments got jail sentences this week in Berrien circuit court.

The Berrien friend of the court's office reported: Judge Chesters, J. Byrns sentenced Robert Johnson, of Grand Rapids, to six months in jail for $5,880 arrears for two children on ADC. Byrns found Johnson in contempt of court and placed him on five years probation.

In addition, the judge ordered Johnson to find work within 60 days or face another six-month jail term, and told him if he does find employment he's to execute a wage assignment of $14 weekly child support and $5 weekly towards the arrearage.

Judge Julian E. Hughes cited Robert Griffith, of 1013 Bishop avenue, Benton Harbor, for contempt of court and sentenced him to 90 days in jail for a probation violation. He was found in contempt for $1,962 arrears for one child on ADC.

Griffith in March, 1974, had been placed on two years probation for being behind in child support payments, and was brought to court again this week for failing to pay child support.

Hughes ordered Griffith to pay $15 weekly support and to arrange a payment schedule with the friend of the court's office for the arrearage.

Irate Customer Kicks Out Glass In Bank's Door

A young woman, apparently angered because a money order, issued in California, was not cashed, kicked out glass in the inner front door of the Farmers and Merchants National Bank, 94 West Main street, Tuesday, Benton Harbor police said.

Joseph Appel, bank vice president, told police the woman drove off before she could be stopped after the six by four foot glass door section was broken. It was valued at over $100. No arrests have been made.

A Benton Harbor man who struggled with city police while being taken into custody on six traffic warrants Tuesday, was booked at the Berrien county jail on "those charges and a charge of resisting arrest."

Police said the man, identified as J.W. Neal, 35, of 364 Summit street, called police to the 100 block of Fair avenue on complaint of a family dispute and while there police were notified of the outstanding warrants.

No one was injured in the scuffle, but police said they used chemical spray to subdue Neal.

Two vehicles reported stolen to Benton Harbor police and state police of the Benton Harbor post were recovered Tuesday, one about four blocks from where it was stolen, the other in Rochester, Ind.

Helen Wright, 684 East Vineyard street, told city police the car was taken during the early morning Tuesday. It was located about an hour after she reported the theft in a field near Seely McCord school, 465 South McCord street, damaged after hitting several trees there, police said.

George Burbach, route 1, Pipestone road, Pipestone township, told state police his truck was taken from his orchard sometime Monday and Rochester, Ind., police notified him it had been recovered. He had not reported it stolen, believing his brother was using it.

Three thefts were reported to Benton township police Tuesday.

Joe Jester, 1583 Reeder street, said a citizens band radio and tape player, valued at about $270, were stolen from two vehicles parked in his driveway.

William Bravender, 134 Eastern avenue, reported thieves stole a set of golf clubs, a golf cart and golf shoes, all valued at about $100, from his garage.

Freddie Ray, an employee of Hull's Terra, 1945 East Britain avenue, told police a $100 lawnmower was taken from a storage shed there.

Two thefts involving fishing equipment were reported to St. Joseph township police Tuesday.

John Gillespie, 4106 Lions Park drive, St. Joseph, a deputy sheriff, told police thieves broke into his boat, decked at Whispering Willows marina, 2383 Niles avenue, taking fishing equipment, seven life jackets and a tool box with assorted hand tools, all of undetermined value.

Neil Tapp, 1848 Commonwealth road, Fairplain, said four fishing rods and reels were taken from his car parked in his driveway.

Benton Harbor police said the Lake Michigan middle school, 389 Pearl street, was broken into and thieves took a television set and two phonographs, valued at $300.

Thomas O'Neil, 1764 Niles avenue, told St. Joseph police $80 in cash was taken from his home sometime between July 4-12.

Christine Duffield, 7111 Farmer road, Coloma, reported the theft of 25 watermelons, eight gallons of elder and two lugs of tomatoes, all valued at about $80, to state police of the Benton Harbor post. The items were taken from her fruit stand on US-33 near Hagar Shore road, Hagar township.

Ed Marks, route 1, box 196, Painter School road, Berrien township, told Berrien sheriff's deputies 18 ladders, used for picking cherries were stolen from his farm. They were valued at about $900.

He entered military service as a private in 1941 and got a direct commission in 1943. our present National Parks and the natural features, are becoming a secondary consideration. It seems our State Park System is taking a step backward.

I, for one, deeply mourn the passing of the tranquility that once existed there, and can never condone the destruction of our few small bits of peaceful wilderness area. I cannot understand why a relatively small tract of land (approximately 1 mile x 1/2 mile) would need a road to carry people into its interior as if the idea of a short walk through a pristine forest was unthinkable. I can only believe that we (and E. K. Warren) have been short changed. The Michigan Department of Natural Resources continues to destroy our remaining natural beauty by introducing the civilization to the wilderness which one tries to escape by going to the wilderness.

Hearsts Trying Estate Takeover

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst's parents have filed a court petition asking to take control of her estate, saying they feared "artful and designing persons" might take advantage of the fugitive heiress.

Randolph and Catherine Hearst said in the petition filed Tuesday in Superior Court that their "only wish is to promote, by any possible conduct, the interests and ultimate safe return" of their daughter, who inherited a family trust when she turned 21 last Feb. 20.

Meanwhile, the Hearsts today denied a story in Sunday's Los Angeles Times that said activist Jack Scott urged Mrs. Hearst to resign as a University of California regent as a condition for Patricia's surrender.

Hearst, editor of the San Francisco Examiner, said in an article in today's issue of the newspaper that the idea was not discussed when he and his wife dined with Scott last Friday night.

"At no time did Mr. Scott suggest to Catherine that she resign from the Board of Regents as a condition of Patricia returning to her family," Hearst said. "Nor did Mr. Scott offer to make a plea on our behalf for Patty to surrender herself."

Scott, who with his wife rented a Pennsylvania farmhouse where the FBI says Miss Hearst hid last summer, has called the Times report "preposterous."

Miss Hearst was abducted Feb. 4, 1974, from her Berkeley apartment by the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army. She later renounced her family and declared she had joined the SLA. She is now wanted on a variety of criminal charges.

a conservative member of the regents.

Hearst said the meeting with Scott was the latest of several he has held with leaders of activist elements over the past several months in an effort to bring about his daughter's safe return.

The Hearsts' petition asking to be named estate conservators said it now was impossible for Patricia "to do any act of thing in furtherance of her own financial affairs nor presently to receive or use any funds or properties of hers presently in existence or to which she may become entitled."

It also said "the proposed conservator" (Miss Hearst) has received substantial worldwide publicity and requires protection against excesses in the same, some of which are represented by matters which have already taken place and some of which represent threats by others to wreak further publicity of an invidious nature.

No specific value was given to Miss Hearst's present holdings, but the petition said she "has monies in the bank and is an income beneficiary of a trust created and maintained by the family and possesses furniture, personal effects and jewelry."

Reds Re-Educate 309,000 People

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — More than 300,000 troops, policemen and civil servants of the former South Vietnamese government underwent full "reeducation" last month, Saigon's Liberation Radio reported today.

It was the largest total figure reported for those indoctrinated by the new Communist regime and indicated that a sizable percentage of the old regime's former personnel have undergone re-education courses.

BIG ROLE FOR WOOD
NEW YORK — The abundance of forests gave the early colonists an essential raw material with which to shape a nation independent of the Old World, according to the American Forest Institute.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Railroad and union negotiators worked to resolve their conflicting differences by tonight or face the possibility of congressional intervention against a nationwide rail strike threatened for Monday.

Federal mediators indicated progress was made during a long Tuesday night session with representatives of the railroads and the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks. But there was a bleaker outlook in contract talks for 400,000 postal workers.

W.J. Casey Jr., chief White House labor troubleshooter, said issues in the postal talks were "tougher than I thought there would be."

BIG ROLE FOR WOOD
NEW YORK — The abundance of forests gave the early colonists an essential raw material with which to shape a nation independent of the Old World, according to the American Forest Institute.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Railroad and union negotiators worked to resolve their conflicting differences by tonight or face the possibility of congressional intervention against a nationwide rail strike threatened for Monday.

Federal mediators indicated progress was made during a long Tuesday night session with representatives of the railroads and the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks. But there was a bleaker outlook in contract talks for 400,000 postal workers.

W.J. Casey Jr., chief White House labor troubleshooter, said issues in the postal talks were "tougher than I thought there would be."

NEWS OF MARKETS

Stocks Pushing Ahead

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pushed ahead today, continuing to respond to evidence of an improving economy.

The opening Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up a fraction from the new 1975 closing high it reached on Tuesday, and gainers outpaced losers by a 2-1 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

Late Tuesday, the Federal Reserve Board reported that industrial production increased in June for the first time in nine months.

The news was taken as one of the strongest signs to date that the economy was starting a rebound from the recession.

Merrill Lynch, which reported record second quarter earnings Tuesday, was up 3/4 at 20 1/2. On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average gained 5.95 to 881.81, its highest close in more than 15 months.

Advances outnumbered declines by nearly a 2-1 margin on the NYSE in turnover of 28.34 million shares.

The Big Board's composite common-stock index was up .25 at 51.24.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .72 at 98.88.

Fruehauf's Earnings Rise 15%

DETROIT (AP) — Fruehauf Corp. has reported a 15 per cent increase in earnings for its second quarter.

Earnings for the period ended June 30 were $5.4 million, up from the $4.7 million posted in the second quarter of last year and more than twice as high as the $2.4 million earned in the first quarter of 1975, the company said Tuesday.

"We are pleased with the improvement in net earnings achieved in the quarter," said Robert D. Rowan, president of the Detroit-based firm.

Sales were $282 million for the three months ended June 30, he said, compared with $337 million in the same quarter last year. Sales for the first quarter of 1975 were $257 million, Rowan said.

Iran Reviewing Pan Am Deal

NEW YORK (AP) — Pan American World Airways says a proposed deal in which Iran would invest $300 million in the financially ailing airline is under review by Iranian authorities.

The announcement of review in Teheran, Iran last week caused speculation that the deal might have fallen through, and news of the delay in signing the agreement caused the New York Stock Exchange to temporarily halt trading in Pan Am stock. Later, trading was resumed and the stock closed the day at $3.75, down 62.5 cents.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

SALEM, Mass., with its sheltered harbor, was a maritime town from its beginning in the early Colonial period. During the Revolution, Salem, the only port of significance not to fall into British hands, contributed to the war by supplying privateers. More than 200 Salem vessels were commissioned by the Continental Congress. They harassed the British merchant fleet in the English Channel and captured supply ships bound for Boston. The World Almanac reports.

700 FIGHT FIRE

RANCHITA, Calif. (AP) — About 700 fire fighters are battling a 4,200-acre brush fire, burning on terrain steep enough to test a mountain goat, to help the blaze from reaching some rare big horn sheep.

HOW TO SLASH '75 AND '76 TAXES NOW!

With medical, food, lodging, and other living costs rising relentlessly, supporting an elderly parent has become more and more of a family affair — with all the children chipping in. But what if no one child contributes more than 50 per cent of support? Does that keno the deduction? Not at all. Here's how, before '75 ends, to choose and use the best support method for you.

If you contribute more than 10 per cent to the support of an individual supported by you and others, you can claim that individual as an exemption if the individual qualifies as a dependent; no one taxpayer contributes more than half his or her support, and the others who contribute designate you to claim the exemption and sign waivers (Form 2126, from any Internal Revenue Service office).

Let's assume you and your two brothers contribute to your mother's support. Years ago, the only way any of you could claim a dependency deduction for her was to arrange it so that, each year, at least one of you contributed more than half her support. If each of you contributed one-third, no one got the deduction — an obvious hardship. As a result, the multiple-support law was changed so each year, the brother among you who qualifies to claim a deduction for your mother also can deduct any payments made for her hospitalization, doctor bills, other medical expenses.

If in 1975 you are planning to claim the dependency deduction, make sure now that you pay all her medical expenses.

If you and your brothers rotate claiming the exemption, pay her 1975 medical expenses by check. Your brothers should pay her other expenses.

To illustrate how errors can be made: say that in 1975 you and your two sisters contribute $1,500 each to your mother's support. This is the year you plan to claim the dependency deduction. Your mother's medical expenses for '75 total $1,200, with each of you paying $400 of the total.

Result: you get the $750 deduction, the $30 credit, and a medical deduction of $400 for your mother, at the most. So $800 of medical deductions are lost to the tax collector.

If the three of you act wisely, though, you would pay all the medical expenses and, in Prentice-Hall's words, you would wind up with a medical expense deduction three times as big.

You also can get two dependency deductions for the price of one via the "unit rule," approved by the IRS. Here's how the unit rule enabled one taxpayer who contributed $2,000 to the support of his parents to parlay the $2,000 into $3,000 of deductions.

In this case, the total support of the taxpayer's retired parents came to $3,800 for the year. The taxpayer paid $2,000 and the other $1,800 came from his parents' Social Security benefits. The taxpayer claimed both $750 dependency deductions — one for his father, one for mother. Out of the $2,000 the son gave, $1,500 went for medical expenses. Result: $3,000 in deductions (which would be swelled this year by $60 in tax credits).

The Tax Court and the IRS approved both exemptions, because for dependency purposes, unless a taxpayer proves otherwise, he must treat both parents "as a unit." The assumption is that the parents' income is spent equally on each and, since the taxpayer contributed more than half their support together, he gets exemptions for both.

Caution: this rule works both ways. Say your father's benefits are $1,680, your mother's $840, and you provide $2,500 for support. Under the unit rule, your deductions are zero, for you've contributed less than half their total support.

Here's what to do: allocate your support payments solely to your mother and keep careful records to prove your allocation. This saves your mother's exemption, because you have specifically allocated your payments and the unit rule does not apply.

Pay your mother's expenses directly for clothing, medical bills and the like. Ask your mother to have the bills made out to her; pay these by check; save bills and cancelled checks. And don't ignore the fact that this year a $30 tax credit is tacked on to each exemption. Also, Social Security beneficiaries each get a one-shot $50 payment.

Witness' Statement Is Sought

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Defense attorneys for Joan Little are seeking a statement made to prosecutors by a man who was at the Beaufort County jail on the night jailer Clarence Allgood was stabbed to death.

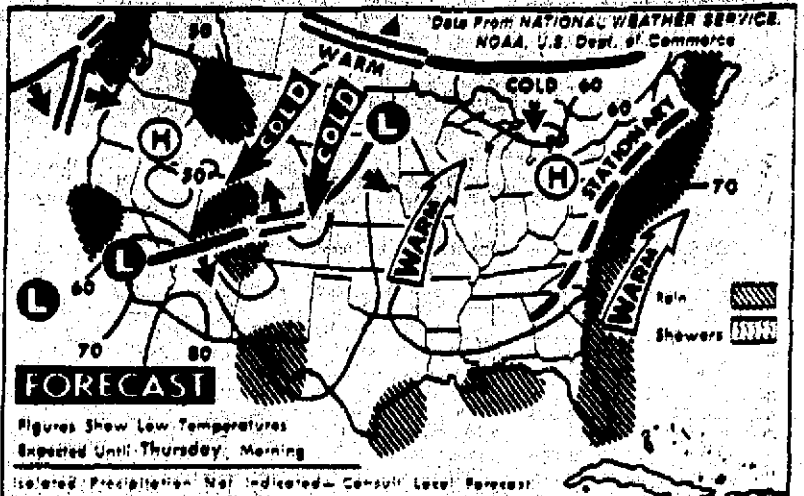

They say Terry Bell, a jailhouse trustee, told the state he helped Miss Little after she stabbed Allgood, 62.

Miss Little, a 21-year-old black, is charged with first degree murder. She says it was self-defense — that Allgood was trying to rape her in her cell at the rural county jail in Washington, N.C., last Aug. 27 and that she stabbed him with his own keychain.

With Miss Little's trial in a second day of jury selection in Wake County Superior Court Tuesday, a second juror was seated, and a dispute arose between defense attorney Jerry Paul and trial Judge Hamilton Hobgood over how the defense quizzes potential jurors.

Defense attorney Jim Rowan said Bell told the prosecution that he helped Miss Little rearrange the scene after the stabbing. Allgood was found slumped on a cot in the cell, naked from the waist down.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Planning Investment On Five-Year Basis

By SAM SJIULSKY

Q. I want to invest about $15,000 for about five years, and notice some securities of a utility company. In the bond list I found one: "12.60 — 81 — 11.5 — 100" and on the stock exchange the same company was listed: "1.18 — 7 — 11 1/2." Please explain and which would be best for the five-year investment?

A. The first quotation refers to the company's bonds which carry a coupon of 12.60 per cent. are due in 1981, offer a current yield of 11.6 per cent and, as of that day, sold at 109 or $1,090 per $1,000 face value bond.

So — if you were to put all your money into the bonds you could acquire $15,000 face value for $16,350 (plus commissions and any accrued interest). You would receive $650 in interest every six months on each bond or $1,260 a year. (If you divide $1,260 by $1,090 you will arrive at a current yield of 11.55 per cent (or, as the listing carried it — 11.6 per cent).

In 1981, when the bonds come due you will get back $15,000. You must therefore deduct the $1,350 capital loss which would reduce your actual yield to maturity to below 11 per cent. But you would get the $15,000 back in 1981 — which is what you want.

The second row of figures applies to the same company's common shares which pay a dividend of $1.18 a year or 20 1/2 cents a share quarterly. The "7" refers to the relationship of the market price of the stock to its earnings per share. At 11 1/2 the stock sold at roughly seven times latest annual earnings per share.

If you divide $1.18 by 11 1/2 you will get a yield of about 10 1/2 per cent. You may, of course, hold the stock until you want your money back (or sell at any time). But you must take your chances on what the market price will be for the common shares on the day in 1981 when you want to "cash in," or on any day you decide to sell.

TRY FOR MORE

Q. I am 73, live alone on $350 per month plus the interest on $40,000 in a 5 1/2 per cent account. I've been told I should be getting a better return on my money. I know nothing of stocks or bonds.

A. I can't see $40,000 invested for 5 1/2 per cent. If you want to keep the money in long-term savings, it seems to me you should be able to get around 7 or 7 1/2 per cent. If you can see your way to "locking up" the money for a longer period, you could consider 9 per cent AAA or AA bonds.

GOT THE WORD

Q. I had never heard of the Individual Retirement Act until I read about it in your column. I work for a small business which pays me a weekly salary. There is no pension program or profit sharing plan. Do I qualify?

A. Evidently the banks in your town are fast asleep. The Individual Retirement Act, enacted last year, went into effect Jan. 1, 1975 for people who are in the position you describe.

You can set up a savings account, securities program, etc., under IRA. Ask your nearest Internal Revenue Service office. If nearby financial institutions can't help you.

A charge of larceny from a person was dismissed against Larry Purnell, 27, of 850 Broadway, Benton Harbor, because evidence to substantiate that he committed the crime was not revealed in the preliminary examination, according to Assistant Prosecutor Pat Murphy. Purnell was charged with taking a wallet containing $350 from James Blue May 21 in Benton Harbor.

Assistant Prosecutor Scott Beatty reported a charge of armed robbery was dismissed against Harold C. Holton, 23, of 227 Fair avenue, Benton Harbor, because essential testimony did not come out in the preliminary examination. Hol-ton was charged with robbing James McIntosh of over $3,500.

June 20 in Benton Harbor while armed with a .38 revolver.

A charge of breaking and entering was dismissed against Harry A. Shumaker, 18, route 1, Sawyer. He was charged with breaking and entering into Tootsie's bar & lounge, Chikaming township June 11. Murphy said charges were dismissed because Shumaker was "justifying in other matters." Two other men have been bound over to circuit court in connection with the same burglary.

House May Cut Funds For Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is likely to approve a bill which would give former President Richard M. Nixon $121,152 for staff, office supplies and other expenses for the new fiscal year — a 40 per cent cut from the amount recommended by President Ford.

By comparison, Nixon was granted $200,000 for his office operations between the date of his resignation on Aug. 9, 1974 and June 30 of this year. And that amount was a huge slash from the $650,000 then proposed by Ford.

The $121,152, up for a vote today, does not include Nixon's $80,000 annual pension or a number of indirect costs related to security, courier flights, storage space and other purposes.

Tracking Station Strike Looms

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — Translators Union technicians at a satellite tracking station near Fairbanks are threatening to strike Thursday as a Russian-American space team circles the earth.

Ed Elsete, director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration station, said such a strike would not affect tracking the Apollo-Soyuz mission but probably would result "in the loss of some of the weather information the astronauts would require for their splashdown."
